Fall Back Before Heavy Russian Pressure

Nazis Admit Retreat in Caucasus

LONDON, May 4—(CP)—The Berlin radio announced tonight that Nazi troops had fallen back to new defensive positions in the western Caucasus just west of Krymskaya, 17 miles northeast of Novorossiisk.

The D.N.B. report, recorded by the Associated Press, said the Germans withdrew "after withstanding heavy Soviet attacks in the Kuban delta for four days."

Krymskaya is 10 miles west of Krasnodar and about 30 miles from the nearest reaches of the Black Sea.

German and Russian accounts for two weeks or more have told of heavy fighting. The Germans generally have insisted that the Russians were attacking. The Russians reported Sunday that they had killed 7,000 Germans in six days of intense battle in the narrow German bridgehead opposite the Crimea.

MOSCOW, May 4.—The Red army beat off a German infantry attack on Soviet bridgehead on the west bank of the Donets below Balakleya in the Ukraine today, killing 100 enemy officers and men, while Russian and Axis air forces traded blows along the length of the front.

A Russian broadcast said Soviet fliers shot down 54 German planes in dogfights west of Krasnodar in the northwest Caucasus Sunday and Monday with Soviet losses totalling 21 aircraft.

In the Caucasus, Soviet heavy guns opened fire for the first time in recent weeks against the shrinking German bridgehead on the Taman peninsula. More than 200 enemy troops were killed and four artillery batteries were silenced, the Monday midnight communique said.

Dress Rehearsal

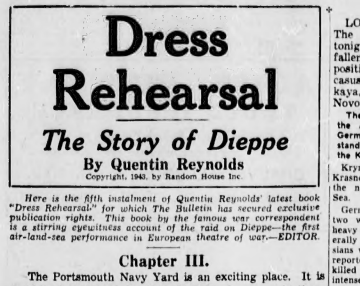

The Story of Dieppe

This book by the famous war correspondent is a stirring eyewitness account of the raid on Dieppe—the first air-land-sea performance in European theatre of war.—EDITOR.

Chapter III.

The Portsmouth Navy Yard is an exciting place. It is one of the best-defended spots in Britain. I was caught there once during a blitz. The barrage the guns sent up against the Hun bombers was something to see and hear. In addition to the ordinary land ack-ack guns, every ship in the yard and the harbor began to blast. The Nazis haven't had much luck with Portsmouth, although they claim to have destroyed it twice.

QUENTIN REYNOLDS

Navy yards all over the world have something in common. Portsmouth always reminds me of the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Drydocks all over the world look the same. But there, flanked by huge cranes, by the terrific din of riveting and with trucks rumbling over the cobblestones in front of it, there is one beautifully anachronistic note. Immaculate in white, black and gold is the ancient H.M.S. Victory looking ready to sail again; looking contemptuously at the drab cruisers, destroyers and battlewagons around her. Nelson met his death at Trafalgar in 1805 in this old ship, and she stands there in drydock, an inspiration to the thousands of midshipmen who go through part of their training at Portsmouth.

Nazis Fearful Allies Plan New Invasion Move

LONDON, May 4—The German radio said today that the Allies have massed huge reserves in Algeria and Morocco and may attempt a landing in Sicily or Sardinia even before the Tunisian campaign ends.

Simultaneously, a report reaching Madrid from the Spanish border town of La Linea told of a strongly escorted Allied convoy of 20 ships plus a number of invasion barges, leaving Gibraltar for the Mediterranean at dawn yesterday.

These reports coincided with an intensification of Axis preparations all along the Mediterranean coast of Europe to fend off invasion, which both Axis and neutral sources have predicted will be launched at least soon after the Germans and Italians have been routed from Tunisia.

NAZIS OCCUPY RHODES

The whole coast of Italy has been declared an "emergency zone," a British broadcast said, and an Istanbul report said that German troops have taken over the strategic

Claim Antwerp Raided by Yanks

NEW YORK, May 4.—(AP)—The Berlin radio said that American bombers attacked the Belgian industrial city of Antwerp this afternoon, dropping bombs from a great altitude.

Heavy aerial combats were reported over the city and the German account, recorded by the Associated Press, said many parachutes were seen descending "indicating that a large number of American bombers must have been shot down."

"Casualties are exclusively among the civilian population," the report, as usual, asserted.

There was no immediate Allied confirmation of the raid.

Workers Ordered Return to Posts Pending Parleys

PORT ARTHUR, May 4.—(CP)—Freight handlers of the Canada Steamship Lines in Port Arthur and Fort William who failed to report for work early today have been called back to their jobs.

Union officials said the men had been ordered back to work pending negotiations with the management. The men are members of the International Brotherhood of Freight Handlers, Railway and Steamship Clerks (A.F.L.) union.

3½-Hour Battle

U.S. Ships Damage Three Jap Cruisers in Aleutians

WASHINGTON, May 4—(AP)—An American light naval force, outnumbered two to one, repelled a Japanese supply expedition west of the Aleutian Islands March 26, the navy department reported today, and damaged at least two enemy heavy cruisers and one light cruiser.

United States ships suffered only minor damage and casualties to personnel were extremely light, a navy communique said.

The battle started shortly after dawn and lasted 3½ hours. It ended when destroyers made a torpedo attack on the Japanese and the enemy withdrew.

There was no doubt among authorities that the aim of the Japanese force was to land supplies and possibly reinforcements on their bases in the Aleutians, Kiska and Attu.

That they did not succeed at all in this endeavour, even though the American surface craft lost track of them, was indicated by the fact that subsequent reports have not told of the presence of any of these ships at either Kiska or Attu.

This was the first report of the operation of American warships in the Bering sea as far west as the vicinity of Russia's Komandorski islands.

North Alberta Victory Loan At $5,702,400

Sales of Fourth Victory Loan bonds in Northern Alberta at the close of business on the seventh day of the campaign were $1,409,700 more than in the Third Victory Loan, and the number of subscribers 3,200 greater than in the last campaign. Sales up to Monday night in Northern Alberta amounted to $5,702,400 with 10,342 investors participating, it was announced by officials at loan headquarters here. The quota set for the district is $12,769,000.

Completed returns on the seventh day of the Fourth Victory Loan showed that Edmonton had practically reached the half-way mark toward the $8,803,000 quota set for the city. Sales on Monday night totaled $4,327,900, or 49.1 per cent of the quota. This is an increase of $682,000 over the Third Victory Loan on the same day. On Monday 597 applications were received at loan headquarters and the amount of bonds sold was $235,200. Total number of applications since the loan commenced is 4,026. Dutch Patriots Seize Daughter Nazi Overlord

LONDON, May 4.—(CP)—Reuters news agency quoted the Istanbul correspondent of the French independent news agency today as saying Netherlands patriots have kidnapped a daughter of Arthur Seyss-Inquart, German high commander of the Netherlands, and were holding her as a hostage.

Dutch sources in London said they were unable to confirm the report.

The Istanbul account said the Gestapo had been unable to find any trace of the girl. The report said further that patriots had marked for death 47 alleged traitors in Holland. Fourteen of these have said to have been killed already, among them Gen. Hendrik Alexander Seyffardt, once commander of the Dutch army and described as the lone general officer to connive with the Germans. He was shot Feb. 8 and his assailant has not been reported caught.

Move to Cancel One Year's Taxes Again Rejected

WASHINGTON, May 4.—(AP)—The House of Representatives rejected again today the Republican plan to cancel a year's individual income taxes as a step toward getting the country's taxpayers on a pay-as-you-go basis. Rejection was on a roll call vote of 206 to 202.

Index Up Slightly

Cost-of-Living Bonuses Will Not Increase

OTTAWA, May 4.—(CP)—The Dominion bureau of statistics announced today its cost-of-living index advanced from 117.2 on March 1 to 117.6 on April 1, but the gain was not sufficient to cause any adjustment in cost-of-living bonus payments.

Under the federal wage stabilization, cost-of-living bonuses payable in the affected industries are adjusted each quarter, but only if there has been a change of one full percentage point in the index since the last adjustment.

REVISION DUE MAY 15

The next revision of the bonus was due on May 15, had there been a change of one percentage point or more in the index for April 1 as compared with the index of last Aug. 15 when the last adjustment was necessary.

The percentage increase in the index since the war began has been 17.6 per cent. At that time the maximum was fixed by law at 17 per cent. At that time the maxi-

Hint Nazis May Invade Britain As Last Gamble

LONDON, May 4.—(CP)—The Daily Mail today published a dispatch from its Madrid correspondent, Harold Cardozo, saying that "diplomatic and military circles in Europe" are discussing a possible reversal of "azi strategy, calling for defensive warfare in Russia and an attempted invasion of Britain with hundreds of divisions, three-quarters of the German air force and power gliders available.

Cardozo said these circles suggested such an invasion attempt would be accompanied by an air attack heavier than Britain's blitz and the protection of troops carrying barges by submarine packs.

The plan Cardozo added, would be a gambler's last throw.

Nazis to Punish Relatives For Weaknesses of Soldiers

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NORTH AFRICA, May 4.—A captured German document disclosed today that the Nazi command had notified its troops in Tunisia that their relatives at home will be "punished" if they surrender to the Allies.

The grim warning aimed at "cowardly elements and men of weak spirit," also said that vengeance would be exacted from the soldiers themselves if they became prisoners and fell into Nazi hands again after the war.

The document, dated at a brigade headquarters on April 18, was addressed to a German battalion commander and marked "for commanders only." It lamented the fact that non-commissioned officers leading platoons had encouraged their men to lay down their arms in situations short of hopeless.

Battalion commanders were instructed to maintain close surveillance over "delinquents and men of weak spirit" in their units, if necessary using brutal measures to take care of the situation.

U.S. Censor Plays No Favorites

In a true democracy laws and regulations apply impartially to all the people of the nation. Even Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President of the United States, is occasionally rebuked by the censor, when she unwittingly breaks some minor regulation in her writings. In a letter to a Bulletin staff writer Mrs. Roosevelt said that the censor has checked her up for mentioning the weather in her column, "My Day," when she has unthinkingly made reference to it. The above picture shows Mrs. Roosevelt in a happy mood.

Runs Afoul of Weather

Wife of U.S. President Discovers Censor Opens Even Her Correspondence

The weather causes trouble for a lot of people. Even Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President of the United States of America, is not immune to weather trouble. But Mrs. Roosevelt's weather trouble is not physical discomfort arising from unseemly visitations of rain, snow or hurricane. It is weather, plus the United States censor that has brought "rebuke" to the First Lady of the United States.

Mrs. Roosevelt, in addition to being the wife of the President of the United States, is also a newspaper columnist. Her widely-read column, "My Day" is a daily feature in The Edmonton Bulletin.

A few weeks ago Harold Weir, associate editor of The Bulletin, was sorting out his morning mail.

He noted with true amazement that an airmail envelope containing copy for Mrs. Roosevelt's column had been opened and resealed with a sticker stamped: "Examined by the censor." The envelope was clearly marked "Roosevelt copy" in large red letters.

BECAME INTERESTED

The fact the censor displayed a curiosity over writings by the wife of the president of the United States, fascinated another member of The Bulletin news room, Staff Writer Jack DeLong. He thought Mrs. Roosevelt might be interested, and possibly amused, by the action of the censor. So he wrote a letter to Mrs. Roosevelt, outlining what happened and enclosing a clipping of the particular column "My Day" that had been "examined."

Mr. DeLong expressed the view that the action of the censor was a

Mr. Tyerman said authorization for reopening the plants had been received from Ralph B. Bell, national director general of aircraft production. Mr. Bell gave his authorization for reopening upon receipt of assurance of union officials that workers would return to work with a promise there will be no stoppage of work during regular work periods.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, May 4—Allied shock troops fanned out north and south of the captured north Tunisian junction of Mateur today in swift new advances toward Bizerte naval base and against the right flank of Axis mountain defences before Tebourba on the road to Tunis.

Supported by powerful artillery concentrations and sparked by air assaults through stormy skies against the Bizerte and Tunis areas, the U.S. 2nd Corps was seeking to collapse the whole Axis front west of Tunis in conjunction with gains by the British First Army, which seized two hills—No. 44391 and 415—10 miles north of Medjez El Bab.

The American advance south of Mateur reached a point 12 miles due east of Sidi N'Sir, on a road running to Tebourba. This put the Americans only 10 miles from Tebourba, which the British were again threatening from the south and west.

BRITISH ADVANCE

The British advance units gained about a mile and a half in capturing the 1400-foot hills and were now some 10 miles due north of Medjez El Bab.

On the southern front, there was intensified patrol activity by the Imperial Eighth Army and increased artillery exchanges, again indicating preparations for big-scale fighting.

Monday's Sales In Victory Loan Are $63,800,350

OTTAWA, May 4.—(CP)—Monday bond sales in the $1,100,000,000 Fourth Victory Loan campaign totalled $63,800,350, and the total for the first seven working days of the three-week campaign is $436,345,250, the National War Finance Committee announced today.

The cumulative total compares with $406,000,000 at the end of seven working days in last autumn's Third Victory Loan, an increase of $69,000,200—but the Third Victory Loan's objective was only $750,000,000.

Monday's total of $63,800,350 compares with $54,554,150 on the corresponding day in the last campaign.

SOME IMPROVEMENT

"It was indicated that both general canvass and employees' subscriptions showed moderate improvement over the individual days of last week and this is officially regarded as encouraging," said today's statement from loan headquarters.

Yesterday it was reported from Halifax that $750,000 in government subscribed a total of $1,750,000. $1,000,000 in government funds and $750,000 as investment of

Lumber Firms' Supreme Court Appeal Is Lost

OTTAWA, May 4.—(CP)—The supreme court of Canada today dismissed an appeal of Mark Anthony and other Alberta lumber manufacturers against the attorney-general of Alberta and the provincial minister of lands and mines—a case resulting from an increase in certain dues payable on lumber.

Associated with Mark Anthony and Leslie Anthony in the appeal were Etter-McDougall Sawmills Ltd., D. R. Fraser and Co. Ltd., Hales H. Ross and Western Construction and Lumber Co. Ltd.

The lumber manufacturers brought action in the supreme court of Alberta for a declaration that the Alberta provincial government was not entitled to charge a rate of $1.75 per 1,000 feet on timber cut under licences granted by the Dominion government prior to the national resources transfer agreement of 1930.

The plaintiffs or their predecessors for many years were lessees or licencees of the crown, in the right of the Dominion, of timber berths in territory which now is Alberta, and since 1930 of the crown in the right of the province of Alberta. For many years the timber dues on the renewal of licences did not exceed $1 per 1,000 feet and the plaintiffs contend the legislation increasing the dues was ultra vires of the provincial legislation.

Rumanian Port Is Said Bombed

LONDON, May 4—(CP)—The Rome radio broadcast today a Bucharest dispatch reporting that air raiders had bombed the Rumanian Black Sea port of Constanta, causing some civilian casualties but only slight damage.

There have been no reports from Allied sources of any recent raids on Constanta.

They stated that a strike vote had been taken last Friday, and also that a request had been made to Clayton Adams, provincial department of trade and industry, to act as conciliator in the dispute between the union and the city commissioners.

Canadian Ships Successful in Recent Actions

OTTAWA, May 4. — (CP) — Navy Minister Macdonald announced today that the Canadian corvette Woodstock has been credited with a U-boat "probably sunk" and the corvette Camrose with a U-boat "probably damaged" in recent actions.

The Woodstock's attack on an enemy submarine was carried out in conjunction with two British trawlers and United States aircraft. The British admiralty assessed the result as a probable sinking.

The minister gave no particulars of the action in which the Camrose figured. The admiralty assessment of the result was "probably damaged."

Mr. Macdonald said the Canadian navy's total of known submarine sinkings stands at eight, including sinkings in all waters. He said there were a great number of probable sinkings and cases of probable damage to submarines, but that he could not give a figure.

INCREASED OUTPUT

The past six months had seen a great increase in the output of merchant tonnage which had put construction ahead of sinking, but over a 12-month period it was possible more shipping had been lost than was built.

Last March was a "very bad month" for sinkings, but January was an unusually good month.

Enemy submarine activity was increasing and there was a steady improvement in the type of U-boat employed.

"I am hopeful the joint command, announced last week, will help with the St. Lawrence," he said. "We will have more ships and more planes and there has been some co-operative training between the navy and the air force during the winter."

MURRAY IN COMMAND

The new command is headed by Rear-Admiral Leonard Murray at Halifax, who will have charge of all British trade convoys from North American ports halfway to the United Kingdom and will have the close co-operation of Air Vice-Marshal G. O. Johnson, officer commanding-in-chief, eastern air command, and the air forces available for anti-submarine patrols.

While Admiral Murray would have charge of convoy operations in the western half of the north Atlantic his opposite number in the United Kingdom, Admiral Sir Max Horton, commander-in-chief of the western approaches, would have charge of the operations in the eastern half.

Admiral Murray's post, Mr. MacDonald said, was probably the most important operational command ever held by a Canadian naval officer.

BUILDING PROGRESS

While good progress was being made on the two Tribal class destroyers under construction at Halifax, they would not be commissioned this year, said the minister .As soon as they were off the ways two more would be started, to complete the present program which calls for eight of this type of ship.

Two, built in the United Kingdom, have already been commissioned, and two more are building there.

Some of the navy's new frigates, the latest and more powerful edition of the corvette, will be in action this summer, Mr. Macdonald said.

Total strength of the navy has passed 60,000, including some 2,100 women, said the minister. The strength in ships is over 500.

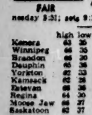

So far, he said, there has been no shortage of recruits.

Aircraft Meeting Condemns Director For Coast Lockout

WINNIPEG, May 4.—(CP)—Delegates to the second national aircraft conference of the International Association of Machinists (A.F.L.) yesterday approved a statement condemning the action of Ralph P. Bell (director-general of aircraft production) in locking out some 8,000 aircraft workers in the four Boeing plants in Vancouver.

The statement, containing a suggestion that Bell be removed by the government, said delegates representing 40,000 organized aircraft workers in all major plants in Canada ask: "Who is this Bell who abrogates to himself the functions of the management of Boeing Aircraft and who usurps the duties of the minister of labor?"

It was noted that the German action followed closely on the conclusion of large-scale British invasion manoeuvres on Cyprus, 250 miles on the east. Axis sources have claimed that American troops are among the large forces on Cyprus, but this never has been confirmed.

The report that the Allies have massed "enormous" reserves in Morocco and Algeria was included in a war commentary by Capt. Ludwig Sertorious broadcast by the German Transocean news agency.

SAYS LANDING PLANNED

"The Allied high command perhaps thus far has refrained from throwing mass reserves into action on the Tunisian front because it is planning a large-scale landing action," Sertorius said.

"The enemy may be planning a landing action on the Tunisian coast, since he realizes that a frontal attack on Axis positions would be extremely difficult and bound to result in extremely heavy losses, or he may be planning landing action on the Sicilian or Sardinian coasts."

A Moroccan broadcast said that Giuseppe Bastianini of the Italian foreign office has sent a message to Adolf Hitler on behalf of Premier Mussolini requesting that the evacuation of Italian troops from Tunisia be carried out simultaneously "and "under the same conditions" as that of German troops.

Bracken Proposes Four-Point Plan

TRAIL, B.C., May 4—(CP)—John Bracken, Progressive Conservative party leader, outlined a four-point plan for the future world at a luncheon meeting here yesterday. He said all Canadians who are not serving in the armed forces could prepare the way for a world of abundance after the war.

Mr. Bracken urged a greater measure of Social Security, a guarantee for a fair return on investment for private enterprise, the assurance of the right to make a living for every young man coming of age and the right of farmers for a fair share of the national income.

Mr. Bracken went to Rossland for a public reception following the luncheon meeting here and returned for a public reception in Trail. Later he left for Nelson.

Bennett Warns on Empire Problems

LONDON, May 4. — (CP) — Viscount Bennett wound up an address on "Progress of the British Empire" at the Anti-Publicity Club of London last night with the bald statement:

"I assure you that the Dominions will not tolerate any action by the British foreign office affecting their affairs unless they first have had a chance to say yes and nay."

He said an ahswer must be found to this problem and recommended immediate action to create an empire air transport system because "if we had that, the prime ministers of the Dominions could sit at a common point on 24 hours' notice."

He declared the problem could not be met without this personal consultation.

Viscount Bennell, former prime minister of Canada, preceded this statement with a warning that although the progress of the British Empire had been unhindered through the years, the "greatest difference yet unsolved . . . lies in a lack of being able to ensure that in matters affecting foreign policy all partners of the British Empire have an equal voice."

Dismiss Appeals

VICTORIA, May 4—(CP)—British Columbia Court of Appeal yesterday dismissed appeals of Joseph Artnur Walsh, Victoria shoe merchant, and L. J. Simmons, former provincial police quartermaster, winding up three cases which arose from charges of conspiring to defraud the provincial government in connection with police stores.

ALWAYS TIRED —Yet Sleep Didn't Help!

Doesn't it feel swell to wake up in the morning clear-eyed, refreshed, just rarin' to go? Yet so many people, especially over 40, get up tired all-over, never really feel their best.

The reason can often be traced to a very common cause—a sluggish system clogged with poisonous food waste. If you are one of these people, you need help every so often to clean out your system, get back pep and sparkle that is rightfully yours. You can do this simply and so gently with the aid of this 4-way vegetable action of Nuga Beans, the small, purely vegetable laxative pills that work on stomach, liver bile, upper and lower bowel.

For a peppier, brighter tomorrow, try Nuga Beans tonight and prove for yourself their amazingly gentle action. Made in England—over 7 million boxes sold yearly—proof of sensational popularity. Only 50c at druggists.

Labor Congress Presents Plan For Bargaining

OTTAWA, May 4.—(CP)—The Trades and Labor Congress of Canada today placed before the National War Labor Board detailed proposals for compulsory collective bargaining legislation.

The proposals were contained in a brief, presented in connection with the board's inquiry into general labor matters, which outlined the views of the Congress on a number of labor subjects.

OTHER PROPOSALS

Other recommendations of the congress included:

1—Payment of the full cost-of-living bonus to all Canadian workers.

2—Amendment of wage control legislation to allow more liberal interpretation.

3. Complete change in the personnel of the Quebec Regional War Labor Board and of technical advisers to the National Board.

The Congress said the Board had the opportunity through recommendations following its inquiry, to lift the morale of industrial workers at a time when superhuman effort on the production line would be necessary to support increased activity by the forces.

Failure of the government to take labor into its confidence on consultation when considering restrictive legislation and in providing representation on war boards and the directorates of government companies had been the source of wide misunderstanding and dissatisfaction, the Congress said.

VIEWS ON WAGES

On the subject of wages the brief said:

"We do not agree with the position taken that reasonable increases in wages automatically result in inflation of prices, and were of that partially true it would provide no justification for the drastic regulations incorporated in order-in-council P.C. 5963 (the government's Wartime Wage Control legislation).

This order-in-council should be amended allowing the national and regional War Labor Boards to render more liberal interpretations of the provisions of this order-in council where circumstances justify such action and certainly where workers are earning less than $25 per week or 50 cents per hour.

Labor Officials In Ottawa For Annual Meeting

OTTAWA, May 4.—(CP)—Labor officials representing the Dominion government and eight of the country's nine provinces were in Ottawa yesterday for discussion of problems arising out of the administration of Dominion and provincial labor legislation.

They came here for the sixth annual meeting of the Canadian association of administrators of labor legislation, set up to facilitate co-operation between the Dominion and provincial departments of labor.

Cost-of-Living Bonuses Will Not Increase

mum bonus payable became $4.25 a week or 17 per cent of earnings depending on the salary category of the worker. Employees who had not been receiving bonuses up to August became entitled to bonus payments of 60 cents a week or 2.4 per cent of salary, depending on wage category.

The bureau of statistics said the rise in the index at April 1 was due mainly to further increase in food prices, but fractional gains also were recorded for clothing and miscellaneous items.

FOOD INDEX MOUNTS

The food index mounted from 127.7 on March 1 to 128.7 on April 1, as meats, potatoes, cheese and oranges registered increases. Eggs showed the only appreciable decline.

The fractional rise in clothing, from 120.1 to 120.2 was due to "scattered advances" in women's wear. Miscellaneous rates moved up from 107.5 to 107.7 because of increases in newspaper rates and barbers' prices.

The index rose from 116.9 at Feb. 1 to 117.2 at March 1.

The index measures the influences of changes in retail prices of commodities and services upon the cost of a representative urban wage-earner's family budget.

Strike Action Intimated by Civic Workers

voted on. Ald. Sidney Parsons, president of the Trades Council, and other delegates were of the opinion that such a motion was not necessary as the trades council would support any reasonable action by the union.

Malcolm Ainslie, vice-president of the Trades Council, and business agent for Civic Union No. 30, said that the members of the union were determined to hold out for full pay for statutory holidays, and also for payment of the full cost-of-living bonus.

He said that a deadline of May 12 had been set, and if their requests had not been met by that date other action would be taken to enforce their demands.

At present civic employees are being paid a $2 weekly cost-of-living bonus for married persons and single persons with dependents, and one dollar weekly to single persons without dependents. This agreement was reached in negotiations covering 1942.

The increase in the cost-of-living bonus and the pay for statutory holidays are the subject of negotiations for 1943.

Youth Confesses To Child Murder

ST. LOUIS, May 4—(AP)—Chief of detectives Fred Egenreither said last night James Franklin, 21, had confessed the murder of three-year-old Mary rane Tankersley a few hours after the girl's slashed and semi-nude body was found in a west side pedestrian underpass. The police official said the youth made an oral confession to stabbing and criminally assaulting the girl.

The Story of Dieppe

By Quentin Reynolds

wait for a few minutes. We sat on the end of the dock talking about everything but the raid. It was a beautiful tribute to Mountbatten's code of secrecy that not once on the 80-mile drive had either of my fellow-travellers said a word about the plans. I hadn't been "briefed"; therefore for the moment I was untouchable.

"There's a good hotel here," the Wing Commander said thoughtfully. "I had a steak there about a month ago. With onions."

I nodded. "The Queens? I slept there once for 20 hours."

"How was that?"

"I'd been on a Channel convoy during September, 1940. We went from Southend here to Pompey." Naval people never call Portsmouth anything but Pompey."

"A lousy trip in those days," the Wing Commander said.

"It was a lousy trip. We got dive-bombed and slapped by E boats, and then off Dover we got shelled. We landed here and I slept for 20 hours. I was on an armed trawler."

"How about that cocoa?"

I remembered the cocoa. "You could stick a spoon in it," I said nostalgically. "I never knew cocoa could be so good. It was there, standing on the stove all night and when you got cold you'd go in and dip a cup full out of the big pot. It's the best drink I know to take the chill out of you."

"That's why all navy ships issue it," the Wing Commander said. "But I'll take tea with rum in it. I used to carry brandy when I was flying, but I switched to a thermos bottle filled with half-tea half-rum."

"You're a bomber pilot?"

He nodded. "Yes, fighter pilots don't have much chance to take a drink when they're in combat. Then at most they're only up for an hour and a half."

ALWAYS CARRY VODKA

"The Russian pilots always carry vodka with them. I've known them to drink a whole bottle when they were up. It's pretty cold at 18,000 feet in Russia. The vodka warms them up."

"Vodka is a fraud," the Army Major broke in. "I was a year in Moscow and I got to know vodka very well. Nothing tough about it. It just tastes tough. Take grappa—there's a drink. Or slivoviz."

I shuddered. "You can have them both."

"I'd always thought that slivovitz was about the worst drink I ever tasted," the Wing Commander said. He took his coat off because it was warm there in the sun, and I gave his left chest a double take. He was wearing both the D.F.C. and the D.S.O.—both with bars.

"You got pretty ribbons," I said, and then added, hastily, as he was about to speak, "I know—in your squadron they give them out whenever you buy a tin of sardines." That's what they all say.

He smiled ruefully. "Right, old boy."

"I know a worse drink than either grappa or slivovitz," I said, and they looked startled. "That kummel you get in London. On the bottle it says 'made temporarily in the United Kingdom.' Be sure and pass it up. I think it's the reason for the petrol shortage."

"It would be a treat to be in New York just for a week," the Wing Commander said. "My God, think of a week in New York! No blackout, all the beautiful food and drinks you wanted . . ."

"If this is a good show and there's a real story in it, I'll be off to New York soon," I said, and they looked at me enviously.

"It'll be a big show all right," the Wing Commander said dryly. "Will you go to Hollywood when you get back?"

"If I can get someone to pay my fare out there," I said. "I mean if I can pick up some quick picture job."

LOT OF NICE PEOPLE

"I was out there just before the war," the Wing Commander said reflectively. "A lot of nice people out there. Do you know Herbert Marshall?"

"My God," I sat up, startled. "He's the best friend I have in Hollywood."

"A good man—Bart," the Wing Commander said. "He's tried everything to get over here. He knocks himself out raising money for British War Relief and now he's selling bonds, but he still tries to get over here. One of our chaps just got back from Washington. He said that Bart went down there asking their help to get a visa. Our chap said to him, "After all, Mr. Marshal, you got half-killed in the last war serving in France. Do you want to lose the other half of your life in this war?"

"What did Marshall answer to that?" I asked, knowing damn well what Bart would answer.

"Marshall just said simply, 'Yes. That Bart Marshall hates Germans,' the Wing Commander said. "He's a hell of a citizen, and some people think he's just another film actor."

We talked of Marshall and of Nigel Bruce whom everyone calls Willie, and of Alfred Hitchcock whom everyone calls Hitch, and of Roland Young, whom everyone calls Charles Ruggles, and of Charlie Butterworth whom everyone calls Roland Young. I kept thinking of the last time I'd been in Hollywood some months before. I'd stayed with John McClain, as I always do, but we spent most of our time at Bart's. It was pleasant sitting there on the dock thinking about the really good guys I was lucky enough to know in Hollywood and elsewhere. The day I left Hollywood, Marshall had a party for me which was so much fun that it made me feel good here on a dock 6,000 miles from Hollywood. Jack Benny and Ronnie Coleman and Roland Young and Walter Duranty and Bill Powell were there and Adolphe Menjou, taking a drink after six years of enforced abstinence caused by ulcers, was there too. I'd just come from Russia, and there was Charlie Butterworth and Charlie Einfeld and Charles Boyer and the rest of my friends, and they kept asking me about Russia. I couldn't answer one of their questions.

IN RUSSIA THREE MONTHS

"I was only in Russia three months," I confessed weakly, "and I left knowing no more about Russia than when I went there."

Walter Duranty chuckled at that. "Hell, I lived in Russia for 20 years, and when I left I didn't know much more about it than when I first went there."

Boyer never said a word. He just sat there at Marshall's bar with a self-satisfied smile on his face. He looked as though he felt apart from everyone in the room, although everyone there was a friend of his. Boyer looked as though he'd just won the Irish Sweepstakes and had been told that there's to be no income tax on it.

"This is the happiest day of my life," Boyer said, when I asked him what was with him.

Boyer talks slowly and he has that same suggestion of French accent that he has in pictures. He's a well-liked man—Boyer. By now Bart's wife, Lee (the only girl allowed at the party), was bartending and she was so happy because the usually abstemious Boyer had asked for another drink.

"Whatever are you celebrating, Charles?" she asked curiously.

"I will tell you," he said, smiling like a kid who is revealing a terrific secret. "I will tell you why this is a happy day for me. Today I became an American citizen. You understand—I am an American citizen. Is that not something to celebrate about? It is nothing, perhaps, to the rest of you. It is something very tremendous to me. Mind you, though, I still love France, as much as I ever did."

I thought of all this sitting there on the dock and the Wing Commander and the British Major talked and the words flowed easily and casually over me because by now I'd put my knapsack under my head and, using it as a pillow had stretched out, and life was good. I kept thinking of that afternoon and remembered how we'd all toasted Boyer and how happily embarrassed he had been. It sometimes takes a naturalized American to remind the rest of us of the heritage we and we alone enjoy.

The thoughts I had lying there in the sun on a dock in the Portsmouth Naval Yard are a part of the great event that was to take place, and, when I think of that event, I remembered that pleasant hour on the dock with the Wing Commander and the British Major, and they are indivisible from what happened during the next twenty-four hours.

"I guess I'm the only one in the world who really liked Hollywood," I said out loud. "I never worked there and if you don't work there, and only stay for short stretches, it's fun."

MORE ECONOMIES

More clothing economies will be demanded from the British civilian population before the end of 1943, clothing manufacturers say. Already cuts have been made in the allotment of supplies to clothing firms.

Army Subscribers 'Over Top' in Loan

OTTAWA, May 4.—(CP)—Army subscriptions to the Fourth Victory Loan during the first week of the three-week campaign ending May 15 totalled $5,397,150—103 per cent of the army's minimum objective of $5,265,000 in the campaign, defence headquarters announced Monday.

Army subscriptions to the Third Victory loan last autumn were $2,650,050. The number of subscribers in the current drive totalled 62,419 at the end of the first week, nearly double the Third Victory Loan total of 32,841.

The army's average subscription in this campaign has been $86 compared with about $81 in the last loan.

Subscriptions climbed from 8,865 on the first day of the Fourth Victory Loan to a peak of 12,139 on Friday when the army subscribed for bonds worth $1,161,450. Saturday's subscribers totalled 9,293, and bonds sold totalled $836,750.

Ex-Film Producer Released From Jail

LIEWSBURG, Pa., May 4.—(AP)—William Fox, one-time millionaire motion picture producer, was released yesterday from Northeastern federal penitentiary after serving 3½ months of a year-and-a-day sentence on charges of conspiring to obstruct justice and bankruptcy proceedings.

You're part of the Crew!

JUST AS SURELY AS IF YOU WERE THERE!

Back the Attack! Buy the NEW VICTORY BONDS

● You're not in there fighting . . . roaring into battle . . . forced to make emergency repairs in the field under fire. Between these men in action on the front and you at home, there's a direct tie. For the men out there are relying on you to help them keep that tank going.

But you are still part of that crew. It's up to you . . . and you . . . to supply its gas, to fill its ammunition lockers, to feed and clothe and arm its crew, to have repair parts on the spot when needed.

And, because it's up to you . . . it is essential that you buy Victory Bonds to furnish these supplies.

Are dollars that can help to buy them, lying idle in your savings account . . . dollars that would still be yours to spend again? When you buy Victory Bonds you are not spending your money, you are only lending it. You'll get it back with interest, later on, when the war is over and the world once more is free.

These days, the right and the privilege to live in freedom must be earned. If that right and that privilege are worth fighting for, then they're more than worth your utmost measure of self-denial and sacrifice. So . . . don't wait to be asked . . . buy more Victory Bonds now.

Clear It Up

Not so long ago a puncture or a blow-out was only a minor inconvenience. It involved usually nothing worse than changing tires or waiting while a garage-man put on a patch. But things have changed. Tires now are practically not obtainable, unless it can be shown that they are needed for business or professional driving. The pleasure-driver who has the bad luck to wreck a badly worn tire may about as well jack up the car for the duration and take to footing it.

For this reason, if there were no other, care should be taken to keep the streets in as good condition as is practicable. Ruts and holes destroy tires, and so does glass. The latter may be a minor cause of tire damage, but it is a very effective one. And Edmonton streets and lanes are more frequently strewn with broken glass than there is any need for. This should be gathered up as part of the street conditioning service, where private citizens do not play the part of good neighbors by clearing it up themselves.

Build Up the Momentum

In the first week of the campaign slightly more than one-third of the Fourth Victory Loan was subscribed. The total was $60,000,000 more than for the first week of the Third Loan campaign.

This is good going, but not good enough to guarantee that the whole amount asked for will be forthcoming in the three-week effort. The indication is strong that the goal will be reached, but there is no positive assurance of that in the figures for the first week. The pace this week should be faster, enough faster to set all doubts at rest when the week is ended.

Nothing succeeds like success. A moral of previous loan campaigns is that when applications come in freely the momentum tends to increase with gathering speed. Those who subscribe by their example induce others to subscribe. If applications and subscription totals for the present week show good gains over those for last week, a veritable rush may be expected in the concluding week of the campaign.

Those who have just neglected thus far to do their buying will help by more than the amount they subscribe if they buy at once. They will help also by making bond-buying popular. It is easy to sell bonds—or anything else—when the impression spreads that "everybody's" buying them.

Better Do It Early

The coal crisis in the United States seems to have been passed. The mines have been taken over by the Government, the miners are flocking back to work, and production for two weeks is assured, during which time negotiations will be carried on between the Government and the miner organizations looking to the making of a new contract.

That these will be successful is hardly to be doubted. Congratulations are due to the people of the United States on the prospect that they have escaped a sinister threat to internal peace, and to the United Nations on the outlook for an undiminished output of munitions in that country.

If anyone failed to see that Canadians were particularly involved in the tie-up, he should have been enlightened by the order which "froze" all imported coal in store in Canada and all in transit to Canadian points. This simply meant that the supply of fuel upon which house-holders in Ontario very largely depend had been cut off, and that war plants in that province would be put on short rations. The settlement has relieved the situation and the freezing order has been revoked.

But it is to be hoped that the warning thus given to coal-consumers will not be forgotten. Even with mines in the United States and Canada producing at full blast the outlook for a plentiful supply for next winter is not bright. Those, in Alberta and throughout Canada, who lay in their supplies early will have one thing less to worry about.

Tokyo Supports the Appeals

The Japanese have endorsed and emphasized the appeals which have been coming from Australia for more war tools, particularly more bombers and fighter planes.

The raid on Port Darwin was fortunately a fizzle so far as ground damage went. But Allied losses of defending planes are said to have been heavy, and there were none of these to spare. The raid was serious potentially because of the number of machines sent over, and is still more serious as hinting at more and heavier raids to come.

It can hardly be supposed the affair was only an isolated sortie, for the Japanese have not been very lucky in "gestures" of that kind. More likely it was the opening incident in the new air offensive which the Allied leaders have been expecting. Tokyo is well aware that it has been getting the worse of the fighting on the island front, and must do something to stop the incessant air, sea and land attacks on its outposts. It has the same reasons for striking at Australia that the Allies have for wanting to bomb Japan.

The Commonwealth is the base from which Allied operations are directed and supported, and while its ports and airfields are in working order the enemy can only look for a continuance and an extension of the operations against its garrisons, transports, warships and bases throughout the island zone. Unless Australia can be knocked out, or crippled for offensive action, there can be no security for Japanese possession and exploitation of its stolen property anywhere in the archipelago.

General MacArthur and Premier Curtin now have evidence supplied by the enemy that they need the supplies they have been asking for.

—V—

Of 600 wounded men brought back to England from the Dieppe raid, only 15 died. The doctors, nurses and hospital facilities won the fight in the other 585 cases. That was a splendid victory.

—V—

The Laval radio says all but soldiers and war-workers are to be evacuated from Le Havre, in expectation of an Allied invasion. That will be another Nazi port which Allied airmen can pound with no fear of injuring civilians. What followed the evacuation of St. Nazaire will be repeated there in due course.

—V—

An airman who has returned from overseas told a Toronto audience that the bombs dropped on Essen in a recent raid were equal in explosive content to 250,000 shells fired from field guns. There is the difference that field guns may register fewer misses than bombs dropped from fast moving planes a mile or more above their targets. Against that put the fact that if a "block buster" lands anywhere near the target it is bound to do it more damage than a shell landing only half as far away. Essen, it is safe to conclude, is a munitions centre mainly in the historic sense.

Seeding is in full swing all over this district. The land was never in better condition, the only drawback being that it is still too damp in low places. . . . It will be noted that this is one of the seasons in which the farmer with a lot of fall plowing done is away in the lead.

The first spring show of the Edmonton Agricultural Society was held Saturday afternoon on the race track. The exhibit of horses was excellent in number and quality, representing a large investment of capital for the improvement of the horses of the district.

Macleod: The disaster at Frank occurred early Wednesday morning. Residents of the town were awakened by a deafening tumult and the violent shaking of buildings. Of all the town's inhabitants numbering one thousand not one apparently knows what happened. When dawn came it was found that the whole side of Turtle Mountain had fallen away. The country east from the town for two miles and entirely across the pass, a distance of two miles, lay buried beneath rock and earth, in places one hundred feet deep. In its progress the great slide of upheaval carried away the entire plant of the coal company, the tipple, engine and boiler house, electric light plant, railway shops and scales and a row of coke ovens, burying sixteen houses with every one of the occupants.

Turtle mountain, sheer wall of limestone 2,500 feet high, there, forms the eastern side of the mile wide valley of the Old Man river, the town nestling at the foot. The mine was the property of the Canadian American Coal and Coke Co. The town has been deserted by the surviving inhabitants, and as the mine has been ruined it is doubtful whether it will again become populated. In the absence of expert opinion it is suggested that the cause of the trouble was the slaking of the limestone.

W. Gordon left this morning for the Landing.

Calls Debt National Blessing

By STEPHEN LEACOCK

I was a witness to a queer matter of psychology this morning. Psychology? No, I'm not trying to use a long word for a short. It's simple enough. It just means the way you use your mind. For instance, at poker when you want the others to think you held at least a straight, that's psychology. At golf when you say to the caddy, "How many was that last hole?" and want him to say seven instead of eleven, that's psychology.

Stephen Leacock

The case I mean occurred in the Mariposa barber shop that I spoke of before—Jeff's place—a sort of centre of town talk and public information.

It was in the quiet hour of the morning with only Jeff himself shaving. I'd got nominated to the chair right away because the morning papers had just come off the bus and most of the fellers preferred to sit and read for a while.

Well, Bill Landy was talking to George Summers and evidently talking Victory loan.

Bill Landy has a mind as quick and bright as the flight of a humming bird. He has to. He's in the mining stock business and in that you mustn't give the other man time to think. Of course Bill is closed just now, so he's in war work—a dollar a year man—the most he ever made, net. He's the chief canvasser for the loan in Mariposa—not the chairman of the committee, though—Mariposa is too religious a place to make a mining broker a chairman.

Anyway Bill was talking to George Summers. George is different. He has a cement business, and you know the way it is with cement. It has to settle. George's mind is like that. You can't make any marks on it—he won't let you—till he gets set and firm. George laid the town sidewalks and he doesn't forget the place where the duck walked across the cement in front of the Public library. No, sir.

I didn't hear how the talk, or argument, started because Jeff had put a hot towel over my face and stopped to listen and forgot me. But when he let me out of the chair Bill Landy was saying:

"At any rate you remember the old phrase, a national debt is a national blessing."

"Why do you call it a phrase?" says George.

"Because it is."

"Is what?"

"Is a phrase," says Bill.

"Never mind the phrase business," interrupts one of the boys who was listening, "Where does the blessing come in? Isn't a debt a debt?"

"Why, this way," says Bill. "You take a national debt like ours, widely distributed—"

"What do you call 'distributed?'" asks George.

"He means everybody holds some," says one of the fellers.

"Oh!"

"Well," Bill went on, "now let's say that individual A holds a hundred dollars—"

"Who's he?" asks George.

"Well, just A, or if you like I'll call him B."

"No, no, call him A if you like. You mean some feller whose name begins with A, like Alec Anderson or Andy Ames."

"Yes, exactly, but I don't mean them."

"Oh you don't!"

"He just means anybody," interrupts the Chorus.

"Yes," says Bill, "I just mean a whole string of individuals, A, and B, and C, all the way to Z."

"I doubt," says George Summers slowly, "If you'd find any feller here in Mariposa whose name begins with Z."

"No matter," says Bill, "the point is this. Each hundred dollars that the government borrows means, to the government, a hundred dollars of debt . . ."

"Yes."

"But for A, B, and C, it means a hundred dollars as an asset."

"Right down to Z" says George, "or is there a catch in it?"

"Why don't you see, George," interrupts me and the fellers in the seats "what's a debt to the government that it owes me, looks to me like an asset, a hundred dollars to the good."

"Exactly," says Bill Landy, "Now add up all the total. If the country owes a billion dollars, is it any poorer? No, not if it owes it at home. It means there are a lot of people in the country who are, put together, a billion dollars to the good. Make it two billions, it's all the same."

"And where's the blessing?" asked George.

"Holds the country together," says one of the listeners. "Who's going to upset or shipwreck a government if he depends upon it for three or four thousand dollars invested in a loan? . . ."

"Exactly," says Bill Landy.

"I begin to see," says George Summers.

"Next!" called Jeff.

"You're next, George," said the boys. "Shave Mr. Summers, Jeff, we'll wait." They knew it was just the moment.

I walked out and down the street with Bill Landy.

"That's a hard business, Bill," I said. "Canvassing a feller like George Summers."

"Oh, that was not for George," Bill said, "He'll take up the Loan good and plenty when he gets set. That was for the other fellers."

"How do you mean?" I asked.

"Why, the way to make a feller see anything, is to let him see some other feller not see it, d'you see!"

"I see," I said.

In Iron Suits

FROM THE TRANSIT

On the subject of saluting, note the historical origin of the practice, which puts it on a very different level from the manner in which it is usually regarded. Note how the practice originated and see if it doesn't to some extent, change your attitude towards the matter.

In the Middle Ages, knights, barons, etc., dressed in chilly looking suits of tinplate, on meeting each other (if they were not intent on adding to the string of notches cut in their lances) had a standing form of recognizing each other. Each would raise the visor which protected the face with the thumb of the right hand, turning the palm to the front. This enabled each to see the other's face for recognition purposes, and the open palm was proof that there was no missile in the hand which could be thrown.

Thus the origin of actual saluting action is one of complete friendliness. The origin of the practice of turning the eyes towards the person saluted, i.e., eyes right and eyes left, comes from the medieval recognition of fraternity between fighting men. Whilst the ordinary peasant, villein, or serf, was compelled to pass any knight, or other metal-suited gentleman, with his eyes to the ground, as a sign of servility, the rank and file of men at-arms had the right to look the knight straight in the eyes, as a form of recognition that both were fighting men.

The salute is a signal of recognition between one service man and another as a right, possessed by serving men. For instance, if a civilian were to salute somebody whom you have to salute, do you thik he would waste elbow effort to return the salute? Not likely! His arm gets tired enough returning the salutes of those with whom he serves without adding anything extra.

There is nobody in the Air Force in this country who does not have to salute somebody. Watch the Chief of the Air Staff meeting the Governor General. Of course, saluting is also a matter of discipline of any member of the service, either officer or airman, is incapable of complying with so simple an order as that regarding saluting, he is unlikely to be at all trustworthy where it comes to carrying out a more important order.

Service men are hardly likely to be regarded as smart members of the service if they fail to salute or only give a very sloppy one.

The Real Victim

FROM THE TORONTO TELEGRAM

It is a popular delusion that the average landlord is a hard-hearted leech, oppressing the poor. Thousands of landlords are poor people themselves, who have great difficulty in preserving the savings of a lifetime in their modest real estate holdings. For every holding company which owns a big apartment house there are a hundred or more small property owners. One reason for the housing shortage in Toronto and other centres of population is the fact that unfair burdens have been placed on real estate until it has become a liability instead of an asset. If a fair return was assured to the small property owner there would be no housing problem in Toronto.

Women's Ingenuity Challenged

Must Direct Every Effort To Hasten Victorious Peace

By MARY ALICE QUAYNE

The women of Canada are facing grave challenges as the war continues in grim earnest. Some of the wartime shifts that are taking place in the organization of the Canadian home can be blessings in disguise—or they can be dynamite, depending on how we face them.

Briefly the factors affecting the status quo of home and family life are: The lure of war work outside their homes for mothers of young children; the sudden and all-but-total disappearance of the maid-of-all-work; the increasing scarcities of all luxuries and many staples.

How are the best ways to meet these new forces so vitally affecting home life? First, women in their homes must face the fact that it is difficult indeed to bring up normal, healthy, steady children through a war period, that juvenile delinquency in England increased 50 per cent with the war, and that such figures are mounting in Canada.

Various organizations are protesting the trek of mothers into war jobs outside their home. They point out that this, even more than the enemy, can defeat the very cause of which we are fighting—the maintenance of our way of life. Millions spent on streamlined nurseries won't, they claim, solve the problem, for the mothers hold the important responsibility of maintaining the home front, often a double duty with so many fathers off to the wars.

Those protesting this encouragement of mothers going into war jobs point out that many leisure class women without responsibilities are still idle. These leisure class women are not volunteering at the rate they should, according to leaders in war work. Add to this group the maids that many women are releasing for war work (not always with good grace) and you'd have a pretty big army of women ready for war jobs.

Grandmother

The wiseacres who are talking about bringing the grandmothers into the picture may be sentimentalists rather than realists. Are they not counting on the grandmother type they remember in the sweet bye and bye? Some of the grandmothers I know do not like the idea of minding the children. They ask why can't they get war jobs. After all, an age limit of 45 to 50 on most of the jobs available is pretty arbitrary.

There's an army of grandmothers who are smart and alert and eager to go to work, but they want regular jobs, not baby tending. They point out, with experience to back them up, that no one can replace mothers in their own jobs.

Servantless

Doing without a maid will be one of the least painful sacrifices the war will make of women. The servant in the house has been a passing institution for years; this war will merely speed up that trend.

The increasing scarcities of all the luxuries and many of the staples in daily use in our homes is disrupting the old comfortable ways.

Are the women impatient or complaining? Definitely, they are not, even though they do a lot of talking about it. When three or four homemakers meet, the conversation generally concerns food. They admitted shopping took far more time than it used to, and requires far more adaptability because meals are planned around what the stores offer each day.

One woman suggests corn flakes in meat loaf to make it go farther, another one a spoonful of cereal beverage for every spoon of coffee to stretch her ration. Ways to stretch the butter, plans for victory gardens, nutrition courses—these are the things that engage their attention.

Victory Loan

Let's consider a woman's life in Germany. If you were a woman living in the Nazi "Man's State," your weight wouldn't be worth a pretzel. You would be prohibited from joining any club other than the phony League of German Women (which is run by a man). You would be denied the universities. You would be shut out of all jobs except those the Nazis designate as "womanly work"—which boil down to nurse, cook, charwoman, housekeeper, governess, or maidservant. But you would be required to work, and work hard, at one of these. As a woman under the Swastika, you would be held incapable of any political or social contribution save that of bearing children (at least four, please) for the glory of der Fuehrer. But would you be permitted to raise them? On no, the state would take care of that for you, you poor inferior creature.

Let's show Hitler and his pompous poobahs what free women can do. Make him feel the collective weight of Canadian Women at War. Let's give our time and brains and money to make this Fourth Victory Loan go over the top. In so doing you will insure Canadian women against the fate of those sad slaves of the Swastika.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Clashing Personalities at Bottom of Coal Crisis n U.S.

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON.—What most people don't realize about the coal crisis is that during the one month of long-drawn-out negotiations in New York, there wasn't any negotiating at all.

Actually, the mine operators made no proposals or counter-offters to John L. Lewis. For one solid month they sat, in effect telling Lewis:

Drew Pearson

"You may not like it, John, but this time you have to go before the War Labor Board."

The War Labor Board was the last body the big miner wanted to appear before. There were several reasons. First, some of the labor members of the board are old personal enemies of his. Second, he has strongly suspected Will Davis, W.L.B. chairman, and public member Wayne Morse, of the University of Oregon, of being out to get him.

Finally, he knew that ex-Senator Ed Burke of Nebraska, attorney for the Southern operators, was a bitter foe of F.D.R.'s and was suspected, rightly or wrongly, of wanting a strike. Many of the operators individually were quite willing to grant some concessions to the United Mine Workers; but as a group they figured it was good strategy to sit tight and pass the buck on to Lewis's old enemies on the War Labor Board.

F.D.R. Vs. John L.

Thus personalities—not excluding the old, bitter enmity between Lewis and Roosevelt personally—played the most important role backstage in bringing on the coal crisis.

Possibly the mine operators might not have been so recalcitrant if they had not received a tip at the very start of negotiations a month ago that the dispute would be sent to the War Labor Board anyway. This tip came in the form of a telegram from the President himself, to both sides, urging a speedy, peaceful settlement and warning that the War Labor Board would be called in if necessary.

When Secretary of Labor Perkins read this telegram she immediately saw the implications, and blew up. It was bad strategy, she felt, for the President to intervene so early in the dispute. Also she knew the operators would take this as the tip-off to stage a sit-down until the dispute could be referred on to the War Labor Board.

So, calling in W.L.B. Chairman Will Davis, the man credited with drafting the telegram, she lost no time conveying her feelings.

"You've put the boss on the spot," she accused Davis. "You should know better than to get him mixed up in this right now. The time for him to step in is after all other avenues have failed—not before."

Fixing Davis with a critical eye, she added:

"Will, you're too excited over this case."

Davis countered that this was war-time and it was necessary to bring all possible pressure on both Lewis and the operators for a quick settlement without letting the case drag on for weeks. He added that Lewis should not be given "special treatment," but handled like any other labor leader.

"Yes, you say you treat him like other labor leaders, but you don't," shot back Miss Perkins. "You're always putting him on a pedestal, singling him out as a special figure. This telegram proves it."

Davis Irked

Irked by the needling, Davis replied: "That's not true. I have only one thought in mind. I want to save my country from a serious strike."

"Well, if you mean that, you are proceeding in the wrong way," responded Miss Perkins.

The W.L.B. chairman challenged this, but Madame Secretary closed the argument.

"Forget it, Will," she said. "This is a battle of nerves and John L. Lewis seems to have got your goat."

Meantime, in New York, the negotiations between Lewis and the coal operators were getting nowhere fast. The operators had interpreted the President's telegram to mean he would have no objections if the case went to the War Labor Board and they were standing pat, hoping for this development. They felt sure that by its past precedents, the Board would refuse wage increases.

The President, therefore, sent a memorandum to Secretary Perkins, stating that he understood the negotiations in New York were deadlocked and suggesting that she send John R. Steelman to New York to use his good offices in an attempt to settle the dispute through the orderly processes of collective bargaining.

Takes a Hand

That's how Steelman, chief of the Labor Department's Conciliation Service, entered the wage negotiations as the President's "personal representative." Steelman, a crack conciliator with many aborted strikes to his credit, announced that it was his aim to reach a settlement which would adhere to the President's anti-inflation and wage stabilization principles.

This caused another backstage flare-up. Davis and his W.L.B. colleagues were afraid the public and the mine negotiators would get the idea that Steelman was representing the War Labor Board. So a W.L.B. delegation called on Miss Perkins and gave her this ultimatum: Unless she issued an immediate press release clearly stating that Steelman was representing only the Labor Department, not the War Labor Board, the Board would take the mine case out of the Labor Department's hands.

"Does this mean you are not in favor of having this dispute settled by collective bargaining, without recourse to your Board?" Miss Perkins inquired hotly.

W.L.B. members assured her this was not the case, but that they wanted to feel free to disapprove any agreement made by Mr. Steelman, if it was not within the Board's "Little Steel" formula. They said it would be difficult for them to do so if current impressions about his status (as the President's "Personal Represenative") were allowed to continue.

In the end, Madame Secretary backed down. She issued a press release stating that John Steelman was returning to New York to continue the negotiations, but as the representative of the Labor Department.

Thus continued the see-saw of personal jealousies, most of them inspired by the basic fact that the White House, instead of appointing a strong secretary of labor has taken away most of Miss Perkins's powers, creating other independent labor agencies which function sometimes in conflict with the labor department. Over this maze of labor agencies there is no authority except the overworked President himself.

A World Monetary System

FROM THE FUNDY FISHERMAN, BLACK'S HARBOR, N.S.

According to press despatches, considerable thought is being given in the United States and England, toward the establishment of a re-organized world monetary system to become effective when peace comes. Whatever plan is adopted, the following constructive reforms should be included: Government finance should be entirely segregated from commercial finance, and anything used as a medium of exchange should be of national nature.

Nations by this time surely see the foolishness of striving for a favorable trade balance. The latter means that more wealth leaves the country than is brought back in return, and the exporting country becomes that much the poorer. Nations should have faced this fact long ago: that is, if they ship real wealth out of their country and by tariffs or other devices refuse to take real wealth back in return, they will ultimately make the importing country a present!

Under the old gold standard, an importing country promised to pay for imports in the money of the exporting country, and yet this money, over which they had no control, was an eternal problem. When other means failed, a loan was often arranged, which only put off the evil day of settlement, and compound interest accrued in the meantime. Thus national debts were continually piled up and pyramided, until the old gold standard degenerated into a debt trading standard instead of a commodity trading standard.

If gold is to stay in the picture of international finance, then it can be used at a fixed price to settle international trade balances, the same as any other commodity, but to tie our internal currency to a fixed amount of gold is an antiquated custom that smacks of economic ignorance and has long since outlived its usefulness.

Many trading countries, no doubt, will want gold, the same as they desire other metals, and their needs can be filled, but not at the expense of breaking down the price level of other countries, and this is what happens once gold is made a part of the internal currency of a country.

Improving Food Supply

FROM THE LETHBRIDGE HERALD

Dehydration of fruits and vegetables, of eggs and other food products has reached a new high in this war. Refinements have been made in dehydration which make dried vegetables taste like fresh when cooked. Dehydration is a process of drying fruits, vegetables and some other foods. In the old days when we dried apples down Ontario way it wasn't very satisfactory, though we will say that dried apples were filling when fresh apples were not to be had during the spring months.

The new method has put dried fruits and vegetables into a brand new niche in the housekeeper's food list. By the new method fruits and vegetables are said to retain their flavor and vitamins, and it is being predicted that a can of dried egg powder will, after the war, be as common in the home pantry as the flour bin. Right now all our dried eggs are being exported to Britain.

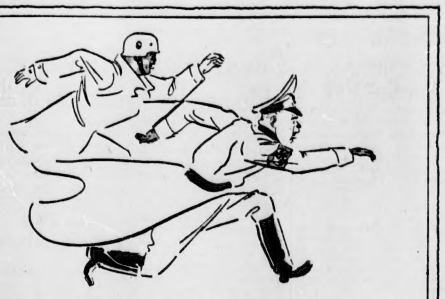

New type dehydration plants are, we are told, in operation now at Vernon, B.C.; Oakville and Belleville, Ont.; Brunswick, N.S.; Grand Falls, N.B.; Hartland, N.B.; Summerside, P.E.I., and Kildonan, Man. More are in process of formation. One pound of dried fruit, or vegetables, we are told, takes the place of 10 pounds of the original, and comes back to the original amount when water is added for cooking. Imagine what that will do in the way of providing a market for vegetables as well as fruits.

IT begins to look now as if softball (fastball is the official title in Alberta) faces the same situation as that which confronted amateur hockey prior to the arrangement made with the National Hockey League under which clubs are reimbursed for players taken.

The new softball league already has the drag-net out for players in the west and eastern teams, Toronto in particular will also be affected.

This latest opportunity for girls of unusual playing ability will no doubt be welcomed by the various softball organizations throughout the country. But many teams will ultimately be affected and it is only fair that the clubs who make it possible for these girls to develop their latent talents should be recognized.

If the report is true that Philip K. Wrigley, the millionaire owner of the Chicago Cubs, tossed $100,000 into the league treasury it becomes obvious that the venture is deemed to have a reasonable chance of surviving and so the quicker the amateur softball authorities consolidate their position the better it will be for them.

GREAT STRIKEOUT RECORD

TO strike out 21 batters in a softball game has all the earmarks of being a reasonably neat performance. But if the total is boosted by 18 more in the next appearance of the same chucker and then followed by 10 additional strikeouts in the six innings pitched in the second half of that day's doubleheader, well then, that's something too.

That happens to be the record of Helen Nichol, of the Army and Navy Pats made in the Alberta playoff series in 1940 between Manville and Olds. Helen leaves in a few days for Chicago where she will try out for the new pro softball league.

Pitching for the home team at Olds on Aug. 25, 1940, the embryo pro wiffed 21 of Manville's batters and yet the visitors won 2-0. The next week-end at Manville, Helen beat the homesters 5-4, striking out 18 in the process and in addition collected four hits, including one homer and a triple.

The same Helen then went back in the second half of the double bill and when she was forced out of the game in the sixth inning through being hit by a batted ball, had gathered in another cluster of 10 strikeouts. Her team was leading when she retired too, but Manville went on to take the game and title. Nevertheless that all adds up to 49 strikeouts in less than three complete sessions, which should rate something.

VICTORY TOTAL OF 35

THE Edmonton Pats' star has been pitching softball for the past six years. Her home was originally in Calgary where she played with Wilkinsons, Hillhill Vies and two seasons with Chinooks.

Last autumn she helped Edmonton Walkrites capture the western Canadian title winning two games in the final with the Moose Jaw. Helen won five out of her six with Chinooks last season, the only loss being a defeat by Walkrites in Alberta playoffs. She has 35 victories to show out of 50 starts during her entire six years of softball.

Oddly enough although pitching is where Helen Nicol excels, she stated last night her greatest thrill in a game came last year while playing for Chinooks against Madeline Hat, when she batted out a homer with two down in the 10th inning to win 2-1.

Several Girls Leaving Soon For Chicago

EVIDENTLY determined to make the new professional softball league a going concern, officials of the recently organized girls' circuit which numbers amongst its backers P. K. Wrigley, owner of the Chicago Cubs and Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers, are reaching out into western Canada for talent.

Helen Nicol of the Army and Navy Pats and rated the top chucker in the province has been asked to report at Chicago on May 17 for a tryout. Five of the Regina Bombers and two from both Saskatoon and Moose Jaw are also expecting to make the journey.

Under the plan announced last week about 100 of the best softball players available in the United States and Canada are being asked to report and from these 60 will be selected and divided equally amongst the four teams in the league. Racine and Kenosha, Wisconsin have already been chosen as members of the new loop.

The loss of Helen Nicol will be a severe setback for the Army and Navy Pats. Clare Hollingsworth, manager of the team, however on being approached last night stated that while he regretted losing Miss Nicol the Pats would carry on in the local league as planned.

"I haven't the slightest doubt but that Helen will make good in the pro league," said the Pats' manager and added "It's a great chance for her and we certainly wouldn't want to stand in the way of her advancement. However, if she changes her mind and desires to return we shall gladly welcome her back."

He also stated he hoped to use Helen in the league opener next week.

The Regina Army and Navy Bombers stand to lose five members of their team. Doris Barr, pitcher, Millie Warwick, short stop, and Mary Baker, catcher, all played with the club here two years ago. Ethel McCreagy and Kay Bennett are also to have a tryout.

Olive Little and Dot Hunter are the two Moose Jaw girls who are going and Muriel Coburn and Lucella MacLean are the Saskatoon players invited. The last named is really from Lloydminster, but has been playing in Saskatoon for the past two seasons.

It is also understood that Annabelle Thompson, pitcher for the Edmonton Walkrites, has been contacted with a view to having her report as well.

The western girls are to meet in Winnipeg on May 16 and then journey together to Chicago. Helen Nicol expects to leave here on either May 14 or 15.

It was the same Helen Nicol who while pitching for Olds struck out 21 of the Manville Merrymakers in the Alberta playoffs in August, 1940. And she lost he game 2-0 at that.

Last year Helen played with Calgary Chinooks, but later joined the Edmonton Walkrites in the interprovincial playdowns. She pitched two games in the series at Moose Jaw against he Royals of that city and won both, which gave the Walkrites the Western Canadian championship.

The new pro league is expected to start its schedule on June 1 and 100 games will be played during the 13 weeks it will operate. This means more than a game a day average.

Salaries for the players are understood to be from $50 to $80 per week. The league pays all expenses while travelling. Ken Seiss, former assistant to the general manager of the Chicago Cubs, is president of the new league.

Frank Crosetti Rejoins Yankees

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—Infielder Frank Crosetti joined New York Yankees Monday to begin training for play, when his suspension ends May 21.

The little veteran was five pounds overweight, but said he had been working in a shipyard at Stockton, Calif., and was in fair shape. He had had a few workouts with sandlot teams at his home.

Crosetti was suspended by Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis for the first month of the season as the result of pushing an umpire in last year's world series.

X-Ray Photos Show Cooper's Elbow to Be O.K.

ST. LOUIS, May 4.—(AP)—Dr Robert F. Hyland announced X-ray photographs showed no bone fragments in the elbow of Mort Cooper, St. Louis Cardinal's pitching ace. His right arm developed severe pains in the sixth inning of a doubleheader opener against the Cincinnati Reds Sunday.

Fragments from the olecranon process, just to be scientific about it, sent Cooper to the operating table and the Cards to second place in 1941. When Cooper asked to be relieved Sunday, Manager Billy Southworth figured it could happen again.

But Hyland, who diagnosed Sunday's trouble as an upper arm strain, said:

"I don't consider the injury serious. The trouble this time is above the elbow."

The doubt still remains, however, as to Cooper's ability to take his turn in the regular pitching sequence. With Johnny Beazley, the team's only other 20-game winner last year, gone to war, loss of Cooper could well be the turning point in the infant National League pennant chase.

It would leave the Cards with only three veteran righthand tossers — Howard Krist, Harry Gumbert and Murry Dickson—none of whom can be expected to come close to winning 20 games, and a rookie, George Munger.

Grover Alexander Is Seeking Job as Baseball Coach

CINCINNATI, May 4.—(BUP)—Grover Cleveland Alexander, a pitching immortal unsalvaged from baseball obscurity even by the war, sat in the stands for the league opener here and watched wistfully as Cincinnati met the St. Louis Cardinals, the team he helped win the world series in 1926.

"Old Pete," who hit the pinnacle of fame when he struck out Tony Lazzeri with the bases filled in the New York-St. Louis world series in 1926, had little illusion about his usefulness to baseball today.

"There a little too much rubber in the old legs for me to dream about playing," he said. "But I'd like to have a go as coach with some team. I think I could teach these young pitchers a few things."

Alexander faded from organized baseball shortly after 1930—his name bobbing up intermittently after that as manager of a House of David team; working in a New York side show, and as lecturer.

"Right now I'm looking for a job," he said. "I'd like to hook up with some team as a coach, but if I can't I'd like to get into war work."

"I've tried several places around Cincinnati, but my age is against me.

"But maybe something will turn up."

Count Fleet Arrives at Pimlico for Preakness Stakes

By DONALD SANDERS

BALTIMORE, May 4—(AP)—Count Fleet, apparently on sharp edge after his winning Kentucky Derby effort, arrived at Pimlico Monday to keep a date in the 53rd running of the Preakness Stakes Saturday and track experts began trying to name a colt which might push him to the wire in the $50,000-added event.

Charley Hewitt, stable foreman who travelled with the speedy three-year-old, said the Count had been indisposed, probably from indigestion, at one stage of the trip, but he added that his charge shook it off before arrival in Baltimore.

Blue Swords, which finished three lengths behind the Count in the Derby, made the trip in the same car from Churchill Downs. Trainer Walter Kelly said the W. E. Boeing entry also shipped without mishap.

There didn't appear to be a colt around which could hope to challenge the Count with Calumet Farm's Ocean Wave still in Kentucky, kept from the Preakness by the sore foot that led owner Warren Wright to scratch him from the Derby.

Blue Swords and Slide Rule were the only others of the Derby field named to joust with Count Fleet in the Preakness, and indications pointed to few starters here Saturday.

William L. Brann, Maryland horseman, counted on his Vincentive, a son of Challenger as was Challendon Brann's 1939 Preakness winner, to keep up with the leaders. Vincentive passed up the Derby to point for the Preakness and won a six-furlong race here yesterday in the creditable time of 1.11 3-5. He appeared a likely starter against the Count.

Dodgers Jump on Phils For 12 Hits in 5-3 Victory

BROOKLYN, May 4—(AP)—Brooklyn Dodgers continued to pick on Philadelphia Phillies yesterday, rapping a dozen hits off rookie Al Gerheauser and veteran Schoolboy Rowe to win 5-3 in one of the two games played in the major leagues.

Kirby Higbe made his second start of the National League Season and pitched seven-hit ball.

In the second inning he was touched for three safeties and two runs, but gave no hits in any other inning until the eighth, by which time Brooklyn had the victory in the bag.

The Phillies' runs in the second came as Jim Wasdell beat out a bunt and, with two out, Babe Dahlgren and Tommy Livingston hit successive doubles. Their other tally came in the ninth when Merrill May opened with a double and Dahlgren singled him home. However, Higbe fanned the next two batters and made the third lay down an easy grounder.

Gerheauser was the victim of all the Dodgers' run-making as Dolph Camilli and Alex Kampouris led a concentrated assault.

In the second Camilli doubled for the first of his three hits and after two were out Kampouris also doubled. He was thrown out, though, trying to stretch it to a triple.

In the third Higbe opened with a single and was forced by Augie Galan, who took second on an infield out and scored on a single by Dixie Walker. Billy Herman walked and Camilli singled Walker across.

When Dee Moore led off with a double and Kampouris followed with a triple in the fourth Rowe replaced Gerheauser, but Kampouris scored on a fly by Vaughan.

Herman's 10-game hitting streak was Brooklyn's only casualty.

VANDER MEER WINS THIRD OF SEASON

CINCINNATI, May 4.—(AP)—Cincinnati hitting came to life Monday as the Reds, returning to their home lot and use of the not-to-dead 1942 ball, smashed out a 17-hit attack against four Pittsburgh hurlers to win 7-5 in the first of a three-game National League series.

The victory went to Johnny Vander Meer, his third against one defeat, although he gave way to a pinch-hitter in the four-run sixth inning after being touched for eight hits.

The game started at 10:30 a.m., C.D.T.—an experiment to determine how baseball can accommodate itself to the varying hours of war workers.

With 2,958 customers on hand, general manager Warren Giles said "It was a success and we'll do it again, although the next morning game will not be on a Monday."

Vander Meer walked six—two of them, plus a single by Al Lopez and an infield play, knotting the score in the second.

Basketball Finals Tomorrow

VANCOUVER, May 4 — (CP) — Both men's and women's Canadian senior basketball titles will be decided on the same floors for the first time when Windsor (Ont.) Patricks battle Victoria Air Force and Winnipeg Altomahs tangle with Vancouver Hedlunds in three-of-five series opening here Wednesday night.

Patricks, eastern Canada senior men's champions, arrive here Wednesday morning and not much advance information has been received here on the team but Vancouver basketball fans believe they will have to be good to extend the Victoria squad.

The Winnipeg girls' team arrived in Vancouver this morning and will have two days' rest before battling the defending dominion champion Hedlunds.

According to meagre reports received here it is believed the Windsor team is not so smooth as previous quintets from the border city but they excel at the "run and shoot" game now so popular in the United States. This style is based on the idea of letting an opponent get one basket if you can get two.

Previous Windsor teams played the old style basketball—a strong defence with a set systematic offence.

Meanwhile Victoria had been working out regularly at their Vancouver Island base until Sunday when the Airmen came to Vancouver.

It is expected that public interest in the men's series will depend entirely upon Windsor's showing in the first game. A Windsor victory would pack the mail for subsequent games scheduled for Friday, Saturday, Monday and Tuesday.

Glenora Tennis Club Anticipates Banner Season

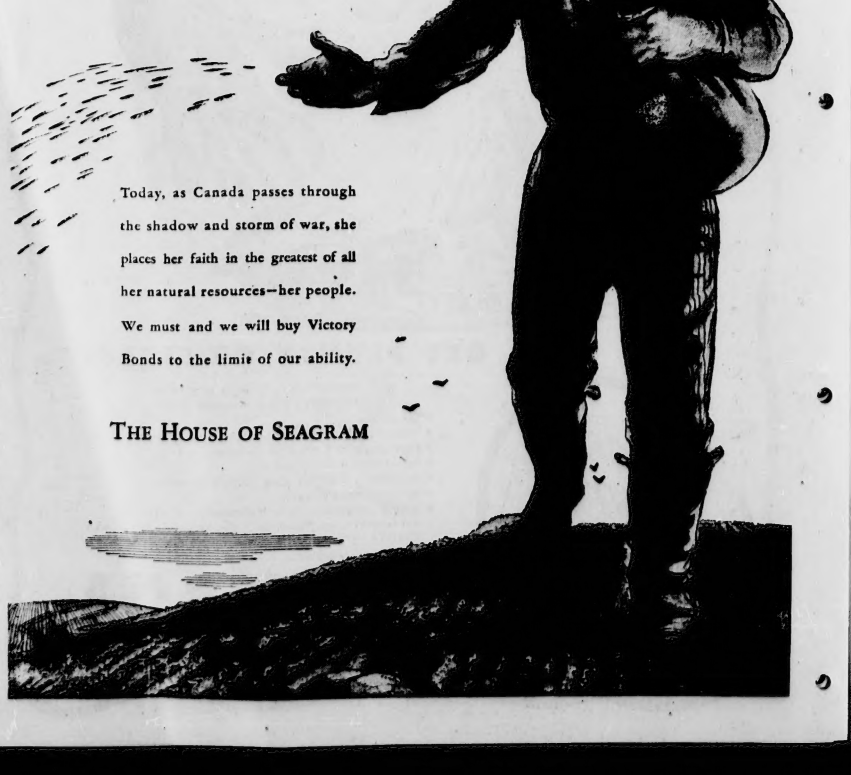

With a sufficient supply of tennis balls and necessary equipment assured, the Glenora Tennis Club, situated at 120th street and Jasper, anticipates a banner year. Many of the old members have joined the ranks of the forces, but, with several younger players coming up and many American tennis enthusiasts anxiously awaiting the opening, the club appears headed for one of it's best seasons.

Glenora boasts of six shaled first-class courts completely fenced in, gallery accommodation, lounge room, large locker rooms and light lunch catering facilities. Bi-weekly dances are being considered and the club expects to be quite active socially.

A general meeting of members and prospective members will be held at the club rooms at 8 o'clock on Thursday, May 6. It is urged that all members attend. Officers will be elected and committees appointed.

With good weather the courts should be ready this coming Saturday, May 8.

NEW YORK, May 4—The story from Philadelphia saying Schoolboy Rowe hit a homer with the bases loaded Sunday for the Phils against the Braves caused our hearts to flutter like one of the butterfly balls Rowe used to throw.

Every time the tall slugger from the Ozarks does anything spectacular at bat our ticker starts acting up, and we feel like this boring because for 10 long years we have considered Lynwood Thomas Rowe a tragic figure—a mammoth misfit—a guy who might have been another Ruth.

Babe Ruth started his major league career as a pitcher—a good one but he was lucky enough to be shifted to the outfield early in his career. Schoolboy Rowe never wanted to be a pitcher, but lacked the luck that might have conveyed him from the mound to the land of his dreams—the outer garden.

Drifting back through memory lane, we recall vividly our first meeting with the tall flinger from Eldorado, Ark., and the things that he said—that night 10 years ago—as we stood in the cavern beneath Grand Central station waiting for his train to pull out. He was a rookie with the Tigers then, fresh from Beaumont, and the club was heading for Detroit after finishing its spring exhibition season.

IN MAJORS AT 21

WE looked up at the big bronzed youngster with the shock of brown hair and blue eyes. Despite his size—204 pounds on a six-foot-four frame—he looked like an athlete, and was one. He could run like a deer and throw strikes from the outfield.

We congratulated him on "making the grade" with the club at 21 and upon the very favorable impression he had made in training. We thought he should be quite happy about the whole thing. But he wasn't. He was downright glum—said he hated to entrain for Detroit because that journey would end his hopes for ever becoming an outfielder.

"I'd rather be an outfielder," he explained. "Because then I'd be playing every day and batting every day. I love to step up to the plate and take a cut at the ball. I hit pretty good, and I've got what it takes as a fielder. But every-where I've been, they have insisted that I pitch."

ALWAYS PITCHED

DURING the 10 years since that night, Rowe has pitched. Sometimes he rode the glory trail. He assisted the Tigers to pennants in '34, '35 and '40. In 1934 he won 16 consecutive games. But often the pitcher's mound became hearts break hill. He had shoulder trouble. He hurt his right shoulder in his first season with Detroit. Recurrences of the injury made him a question mark every spring and sent him back to Beaumont part of the '38 season. Last June he was waived out of the American League to Brooklyn, then shifted to Montreal. Now he's with the Phillies.

Bucky Harris was managing Detroit in '33 when Rowe came up. Now, after a decade, their trails cross again, and Bucky is piloting the Phillies. When that home run went whistling out Sunday, we wonder if Bucky's heart hesitated, and if Bucky wondered:

"Would he have been another Ruth?"

JERSEY CITY, May 4.—(AP)—Toronto evened its four-game International league series with Jersey City with two apiece yesterday by defeating the Little Giants 5-3 in 15 innings.

Rube Fischer, who went the distance for Jersey City, allowed 14 safeties but poor support cost him four unearned runs. The defeat was Fischer's fourth of the season.

The Leafs won out in the 16th on Jim Ripple's single, a walk to Davis, a two base error by Reyes on Crompton's roller and a single by Strincevich.

CANADIAN SPORTSHOTS

By CHARLES EDWARDS

TORONTO, May 4.—(CP)—The other day Baz O'Meara of the Montreal Star suggested in his sports column that Fred (Cyclone) Taylor of Vancouver would be an ideal man to succeed Frank Calder as president of the National Hockey League. Now there is a suggestion that hits the nail squarely on the head.

Taylor was one of the greatest hockey players who ever lived—some claim the greatest. In recent talk of a hockey hall of fame, the Cyclone's name was most prominently mentioned. He played with two Stanley cup teams, the Ottawa Silver Seven in 1909 and Vancouver Millionaires in 1915. He scored 148 goals in 126 games in seven seasons with Vancouver.

Yet Taylor was not only a great player. He is a fine organizer and a successful business man. He was president of the now-defunct Pacific Coast Hockey League. He is district superintendent if immigration, Pacific division.

It is doubtful whether Taylor could be induced to leave his present position to become N.H.L. president. Andy Lytle of the Toronto Daily Star says Cyclone is too fine a man to be burdened with the headaches of N.H.L.'s highest position.

Yet Lytle sees Taylor as a great man for the position. He writes: "If I had a vote for this hockey office, Fred Taylor would never get it. He is a man who has moulded his life on the principle of the golden rule. . . . I do not think he has ever thrown a foul, or dirty punch, in sport or in business, in his life. . . .

"Cyclone Taylor, president of the N.H.L.? They'd break his heart."

Player Losses Thought Fatal

Yankees Surprise Writers By Leading American League

By HARRY GRAYSON

NEW YORK, May 4—When the Yankees withdrew from snowbound and windswept Asbury Park suffering from chilblains and the sniffles to drop six straight exhibition games to major league clubs—five to the Dodgers and another to the Braves—baseball writers wrote about the fall of an empire, the end of an era.

You read that the New Yorks, winners of six of the last seven American League pennants, seven of the last 11, 10 of the last 17 and 13 of the last 22, had cracked up like the one-hoss shay.

Gone were the great Joe DiMaggio and his outfielding partner, Tommy Henrich. Absent were Phil Rizzuto, the shortstopping magician, and capable Red Rolfe. Frank Crosetti, who could fill in for both, would get a late start because he shoved an umpire in the World Series. Buddy Hassett would be missed. The Rupperts no longer had the steadying influence of Rufus the Red Ruffing in the box. Bill Dickey could not be a catcher, and the Yankees had lost three-quarters of their infield and two-thirds of their outfield.

LOST EXHIBITIONS

It was just too bad. Joe McCarthy could no longer lean back in the dugout and turn on a cluster of runs whenever he chose to. Yes, the Bronx Bombers had finally come back to the field.

So what happened? Well the Yankees who couldn't win an exhibition game promptly launched a winning streak when the real firing commenced and while playing themselves into shape.

What the critics overlooked was that neither Charley Keller nor Catcher Dickey and his big stick participated in the losing exhibition string.

The weather practically shut out the Yankees as far as work was concerned at Asbury Park. The club puffed its way through the exhibitions and into the regular campaign with muscles aching.

GOOD REPLACEMENTS

Once the outfield settled into something approaching its real stride, however, it was discovered that the Yankees had done a better job in the way of lining up replacements than any other big league organization.

George Stirnweiss and Bill Johnson cover the left side of the infield like a net. Snuffy Stirnweiss is going to be an even more skillful shortstop when he works off the surplus flesh which, due to his peculiar stocky build, accumulates around his chest.

The outfield, with Kong Kong Keller, Tuck Stainback, Roy Weatherly, Johnny Lindell and Bud Metheny, is satisfactory under the circumstances Nick Etten will do at first base. There was never any question about the pitching.

GO WEST MAY 12

Senators have little more than an outfield, the Red Sox no outfield at all and the Athletics are even worse than usual.

So with the longer wartime series and only three intersectional trips, the Yankees are likely to go west for the first time May 12 with a commanding lead and certainty in condition to tackle the strongest western clubs.

By now the scribes have found that their obituaries were a bit premature.

Reports on the sad situation of the Yankees were grossly exaggerated.

PLAN RECONSTRUCTION

Portsmouth, England's great naval base which has been hard pounded by the German air force, is already laying plans for reconstruction when peace returns.

HOW TO RELIEVE PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY AND EASILY
If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.
For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from Merrick Drug Stores or any druggist and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and start healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had on such a small cost.
If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

John L. Sullivan First to Aim at Jaw for Knockout

By BILLY ROCHE

Great fighters too frequently are remembered by future generations as they were in the acre and yellow of their careers, often as they appeared in making tragic last stands. This is especially true in the case of John L. Sullivan. The popular conception of Sullivan today is the rather round veteran who finally fell from exhaustion in the 21st round of his match with the swifter and younger Jim Corbett.

I saw Sullivan in several stages while he still was the Boston Strong Boy. He was well built, fighting best at about 190 pounds and standing 5 feet 10½. He wore a little black mustache. He had high cheekbones and sunken cheeks.

Sullivan was taught to box by a Negro, who was the first boxing instructor at Harvard. He was a fine, stand-up fighter, as clever a heavyweight as you would care to see. He knew how to feint, and had the best one-two punch you ever saw.

Sullivan was first to discover that the point of the jaw was vulnerable. He was first to punch at the point of the jaw to score a knockout. Until then, fighters aimed for the temple, or for a point in back of the ear.

It was also a pleasure to watch the other two Jacks of that era—Dempsey the Nonpareil and Mc-Aliffe. They, too, came up through the bare knuckle and skin tight glove days, and were aggressive as well as evasive.

SMITH AND McFADDEN

I managed the two roughest and toughest fighters I ever saw—Mysterious Billy Smith and Elbows McFadden. I learned all the tricks from this pair.

I've always said Smith was the toughest fighter I ever saw, but I'm drawing a line as fine as a silk-worm's thread, for McFadden could also dish it out in large quantities.

Smith was the only fighter who had Joe Walcott's number. They met a half dozen times and, while record books may not agree to the letter, Smith had the best of 15, 20 and 25-round battles.

I recall Walcott showing up for one match with a long pistol in his back pocket, and Smith saying that even if he used that it wouldn't do him any good.

George Dixon was an amazing little warrior of the early days. Little Terry McGovern was an outstanding featherweight and attraction because he had a whirlwind attack and never clinched.

Kid Lavigne was a lightweight champion formidable that he came within a gnat's eyelash of knocking out Joe Walcott in a handicap match.

Jack Dempsey was a stylist and the first dude boxer.

BOXING KILLED IN EAST

Bob Fitzsimmons was the daddy of all middleweights, which is what made him heavyweight champion at a time when he could still do 158 pounds.

I was at the ringside in New Orleans, Jan. 14, 1891, when he won the middleweight title by knocking out the original Dempsey in the 13th round. So it did not surprise me when the freakishly built Australian knocked out Jim Corbett for the heavyweight title six years later.

Having scouted Jim Jeffries in a rather unsatisfactory performance against Bob Armstrong in New York, Aug. 5, 1898, Fitzsimmons took him for a stiff one when they met at Coney Island the following June.

Jeff knocked out Fitz in the 11th beat Tom Sharkey in 25, and caught up with Jim Corbett in the 23rd round of a dramatic match before boxing was killed in the East in New York and Chicago.

So when Sunshine Jim Coffroth came east with the turn of the century, met Big Jim Kennedy, and programmed the golden glove days in California, he had the field all to himself.

Syracuse Fans Like Bonds Too

Rangers Assist Loan Campaign

WINNIPEG, May 4 — (CP) — Trading their skates for army jeeps, Winnipeg Rangers, Dominion junior hockey champions, Monday participated in a fourth victory loan parade here and then were guests of the war finance committee at a banquet.

At completion of the victory loan parade the puck used in the final game against Oshawa Generals, eastern champions, was donated to the rubber drive of the Canadian Patriotic Salvage Corps.

Mayor Garnet Coulter of Winnipeg termed the Rangers a team who refused to be beaten and "that's the major factor in any victory and the factor that will push Manitoba over the hump in the victory loan."

Nazis' Main Battle Fleet Sails Out of Trondheim

By ROBERT VERMILLION
Exclusive to The Edmonton Bulletin
Copyright, 1943, by British United Press

LONDON, May 4—Reports from Sweden said today that Germany's main battle fleet has sailed northward from Trondheim, Norway, for an all-out attempt to cut the Allies' northern supply route to Russia.

The move was said to be designed also to draw off additional heavy British naval units at a time when they are needed to protect convoys moving reinforcements of men and material from the United States and Canada to England and Africa for impending invasions of western and southern Europe.

At the same time, Swedish reports said, the assignment of battleships, cruisers and destroyers to the task of stemming the flow of supplies to Russia has released scores of torpedo bombers from northern Norway, where they have been carrying the main brunt of the convoy attacks, for transfer to Sicily to help guard against any Allied invasion.

AIR RECONNAISSANCE

The reported German fleet movements lent new importance to the air ministry's announcement that coastal command planes carried out reconnaissance in force off Norway Saturday. Seven aircraft were lost, a high toll for a reconnaissance operation.

A German transocean broadcast last night said 60 British "destroyer" and torpedo planes approached the Norwegian coast at low altitude Saturday and were engaged by German planes. Planes and ground defences shot down 15 British planes and the attack failed to gain the "slightest success," the broadcast claimed.

Latest reports from neutral sources indicated the German fleet stationed at Trondheim was spearheaded by the 35,000 tons-plus battleship Tirpitz and included the 10,000-ton pocket battleships Luetzow and Admiral Scheer, two cruisers of the 10,000-ton Admiral Hipper class and a number of light cruisers and destroyers.

There also was a possibility that one or both of the 26,000-ton sister battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau and possibly the new 19,250-ton aircraft carrier Graf Zeppelin had joined the fleet in Trondheim.

Extortionist Given Five-Year Sentence

LOS ANGELES, May 4.—(AP)—Roger Barker, 19, who pleaded guilty to sending extortion notes to former Gov. Culbert L. Olson and film stars Bette Davis, Rosalind Russell, Mickey Rooney and Deanna Durbin, formerly of Winnipeg, was sentenced to serve five years in Federal prison yesterday. Judge Ralph Jenney also placed the Filer, Ida., boy on probation for another five years.

striking example of the working mechanics of a democracy, where those in the highest stations cheerfully submit to the same rules and regulations that govern all the people.

Mrs. Roosevelt was interested in the incident because on Monday, Mr. DeLong received a letter from Mrs. Roosevelt herself.

"I do not believe anything was censored in that column, but the censor does watch my column because several times I have spoken of the weather, without thinking, and have been rebuked, just like anyone else," she wrote.

A FOND HOPE

In his letter to Mrs. Roosevelt the reporter expressed the hope that President Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt might find it possible to visit the troops constructing the Alaska Highway.

He added the opinion that the Canadian people in the northwest would rejoice greatly if such a visit could be carried out.

In her reply to The Bulletin writer, Mrs. Roosevelt had this to say about the suggested visit:

"I quite agree with you, it would be very interesting if the President and I could go to the new Alaska Highway but it may not be possible in the near future."

BUSY WOMAN

Mrs. Roosevelt is one of the busiest women in the world, but even on a long and tiring journey, she finds time to attend to her correspondence. Although the letter to her from The Bulletin reporter was mailed from Edmonton to the White House in Washington, Mrs. Roosevelt's reply came from Los Angeles, during the First Lady's recent tour of the West Coast.

The standout feature of the motion picture, "Yankee Doodle Dandy" in which James Cagney won the 1942 academy award, was the scene where George M. Cohan, famous composer and producer entered President Roosevelt's office at the White House without escort of any kind, to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor.

ONLY IN DEMOCRACY

After the President pinned the highest award of the nation on the breast of the composer for his contribution to the Allied cause in the First Great War by such rallying songs as "Over There", Cohan asked:

"Where else in the world could an ordinary guy like me drop in and talk things over with the head man?"

Members of The Bulletin news staff echo that sentiment.

Where else in the world, with the exception of the United States or British countries would the wife of the nation's leader promptly reply to a letter from a reporter on a newspaper in a distant city?

Daily War Map—Exclusively in The Edmonton Bulletin

The accompanying map shows the Tunisian battle line as it stands at present. The changes are too slight to be appreciable. Nevertheless the situation may change radically at any time if the fleet movements reported from Gibraltar actually portend an audacious tour de force. If a powerful diversion attack is made or not, the arrival of strong reinforcements on the Tunisian battle front seems probable and may provide that little extra weight needed to force a breach in the enemy's defences.

Admiral Robert Protests Break With Martinique

(Copyright 1943 by The Associated Press)

NEW YORK, May 4.—(AP)—Admiral Georges Robert, French high commissioner to Martinique, disclosed last night that he had sent a note to the state department protesting the United States' action in breaking off relations with Martinique. He urged that the department publish the text of his note.

Admiral Robert cabled this information to the Associated Press in reply to a query asking his views on the state department's action, announced Friday, abrogating informal agreements with Martinique. Washington acted on grounds that the United States would not "recognize, or negotiate with any French representative in the Antilles who remains subservient to or maintains contact with the Vichy regime."

Admiral Robert's message to the Associated Press last night said:

"The American government decides, in alleging a certain situation of metropolitan France, to annul an accord concluded at a time when this situation already existed.

"It offers nothing else in exchange and refuses, by recalling its consul general, all possibility of a fresh proposal on my part.

PROTESTS IN NOTE

"I can only take note of such a decision, meanwhile protesting, which I have done in a note delivered May 1, and therefore I can see only an advantage in the full publication of the text in the American press by the state department.

"ADMIRAL ROBERT.

"May 3, 1943."

The state department has not announced receipt of a reply by Robert to Secretary Cordell Hull's note to him, delivered April 26.

Robert's message to the Associated Press did not indicate what course he planned to follow, nor the nature of the information in his note to the government that he wished made public.

funds of the provincial Workmen's Compensation Board.

"An increasing focus of attention is being turned on the encouraging and steady expansion of subscription totals from the general canvass of citizens throughout Canada, and from the payroll savings purchases of bonds by employee groups and members of the armed forces," said loan headquarters.

"The army has already passed its objective of $5,265,000 by about 20 per cent, the air force have a subscription total of approximately $4,000,000 already, and navy units report a still-rising volume of support for the loan."

After passing its $287,500 objective by $46,650, western air command now has raised its objective to $400,000.

FIRM SUBSCRIPTIONS

Corporate subscriptions in the "special names" group include:

North American Life Assurance Co., Toronto, $5,000,000; Monarch Life Assurance Co., Winnipeg, $1,000,000; Canada Steamship Lines, Ltd., Montreal, $1,000,000; Shawinigan Water and Power Co. and associated companies, $3,500,000, with Shawinigan Water and Power company's employees subscribing an additional $525,000; Canadian International Paper Co. and affiliated companies, Montreal, $3,140,000.

"While returns for Monday are not yet complete, army sources had no hesitation in stating that subscriptions in Canada alone are approximately $1,000,000 over the $5,265,000 objective," loan headquarters said. "Standings of districts and camps over their quotas have not changed but percentages have. M.D. 4 (Montreal) leads with 226 per cent., followed by M.D. 12 (Regina) 167 per cent.; M.D. 1 (London, Ont.) 164 per cent.; Petawawa Camp (Ont.) 153 per cent.; and M.D. 7 (Saint John, N.B.) 130 per cent.

Stalin "Welcomes" Raids on Germany

LONDON, May 4—(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill received from Premier Joseph Stalin yesterday a message saying that "I welcome the bombing of Essen, Berlin and other industrial centres of Germany."

"Every blow delivered by your air force to the vital German centres," the Soviet leader said, "evokes a most lively echo in the hearts of many millions throughout the length and breadth of our country."

The tenor resembled that of a section of his May Day order in which, reviewing the progress of the war, he said: "the valiant Anglo-American air force strikes shattering blows at military and industrial centres in Germany and Italy, foreshadowing the formation of a second front in Europe."

It's an Ancient Privilege

"Home Brewing" Quite Legal Says Ottawa—But Complicated

OTTAWA, May 4.—(CP)—The legal brewing of beer in the home is a matter between a man and his exciseman.

Told of an Edmonton survey that showed stocks of crocks, wooden tubs, pressed hops, malt and bottle tops—all pointing to beer in the home—were disappearing from the market, excise officials said yesterday that if the situation were associated with complaints of store beer shortages they knew nothing about it.

Actually, the man who brews his own beer may not be committing a crime. He may merely be exercising an ancient privilege that was granted when armored knights decreed that the Englishman's home is his castle.

THERE'S "COMPLICATIONS"

The law says, first, that a man can brew in his own home. Having said so, it establishes the complications. He can brew only for himself and his family. Before he gets the paraphernalia in operation (getting it is something of a trick these days) he must obtain from his nearest excise official what is called "a letter of consent."

This sounds simple. But the exciseman is curious. He will want to know that the would-be brewer has never been mixed up in any funny liquor business, the type of equipment he is going to use, and who is going to drink the finished product. If the beer is given someone who shouldn't have beer, then the list of penalties is imposing.

But, supposing all the hazards are overcome and the "letter of consent" is obtained the good citizen may spare a glance at provincial regulations which provide that he cannot have in his possession liquor which was not purchased from a provincial liquor control board.

ALWAYS PHOTOGRAPHY

Then, of course, he can put his amateur photography chemicals in the crocks, the washing in the tubs, feed the malt and the hops to the hens and play checkers with the bottle tops.

However, one authority did suggest that if a man had the "letter of consent" from an excise official, the provincial officials might be inclined to be more tolerant of human weaknesses.

Excise officials said that in the days of prohibition in various parts of Canada, the ancient art of home-brewing received lively restoration, with thousands of "letters of consent" applied for and granted in just cases.

When "dry" days passed, the Canadian beer drinker found it far more convenient to buy his supplies in the beer parlor or liquor store, and the demand for "letters" declined.

NO SPECIAL DEMAND

Thus far, in spite of restrictions in the supply of beer, there has been no special demand for permission to brew at home.

"The demand is neglibible and there has been no increase lately," an official said.

Allied Troops Are Continuing Tunisian Gains

Allied bombs exploding on air fields—were made possible by the fall of Mateur Junction, 20 miles southwest of the naval base, at 11 a.m., Moonday.

Some German troops were believed cut off and encircled in the hills of the so-called Jeffna defences, south and west of Mateur, where the Americans captured Green and Bald hills after many days of grim fighting. Some 200 Germans already have been captured in the Mateur area operations.

GRIM BATTLES AHEAD

Spokesmen warned, however, that there is grim fighting ahead both north and southeast of Mateur. East of the Tine river, which runs north and east of Mateur, there is a range of hills affording the enemy good positions. The Germans destroyed the bridge over the river but that failed to stop the American advance.

The Americans, in co-operation with the French, immediately pushed northward along the 10-mile road to Ferryville, which lies between Lake Achkel and Lake Bizerte, 10 miles from the city of Bizerte. (A London broadcast said Ferryville was under American artillery fire which had made Bizerte airdromes untenable.)

Headquarters at noon today had no definite information as to how far the Americans and French had gone toward Ferryville, where they are expected to meet strong German resistance, but American bombers heavily attacked the Bizerte airdrome Monday. Today's communique merely described the advance in the north as continuing beyond Mateur.

MAY FLANK DEFENCES

French troops were pushing toward the northwest corner of Lake Achkel, which may outflank the enemy's Ferryville defences.

American artillery units were officially singled out for high praise in the operations in northern Tunisia, where the massed fire of United States "Long Toms" were cited as one of the main reasons for a fast advance.

The actual capture of Mateur came suddenly. The French on the northwest realized Sunday that the enemy was pulling out of defence positions west of Lake Achkel. At the same time, the Americans to the south sensed the enemy retirement and immediately threw in a hard-hitting attack.

One American advance unit reached the road junction six miles northwest of Mateur by early morning. A reconnaissance unit was sent ahead while this area was being consolidated and it reached Mateur without meeting serious opposition.

OPEN ROAD SOUTHWARD

Meanwhile, other American troops south of the Mateur road and northwest of Tebourba were pushing eastward against the German flank. The capture of Mateur also opened a road suthward for attack on Tebourba and, although there is a formidable range of hills to be passed, this road offers an opportunity to outflank the last important enemy defence line guarding the plain of Tunis.

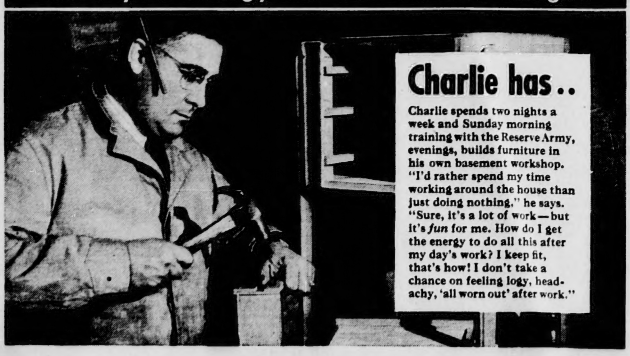

Ranging ahead of the ground forces, American Flying Fortresses blasted port installations at Bizerte while 18 medium bombers devasted an airfield on the outskirts of Tunis. Ten and probably 12 planes were destroyed on the ground at the airfield.

Jetties along the Tunisian coast, which would play an important part in any Axis evacuation by sea, were attacked by fighter-bombers and fires started. Fighters, meantime, swept the battle area, strafing enemy positions and vehicles. Eight planes were lost in all operations yesterday.

Trades Council Asks Mandatory Payment of Full Bonus

National War Labor Board Will Be Presented Brief Protesting Present Policy

Request that the federal government, by order in council, make it mandatory that the full cost-of-living bonus, as called for in accordance with the cost-of-living when the bonus was inaugurated, be paid to all workers was contained in a brief prepared by the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council for submission to the National War Labor Board.

The brief, which will be submitted to the National board by officers of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, was prepared by the executive of the Edmonton trades body and received the unanimous endorsation of delegates at Monday night's Trades and Labor Council meeting.

In the brief it was pointed out that the government by means of orders-in-council enacted a cost-of-living bonus, but through the medium of various orders issued in the administration of the bonus there is no definitely equitable and understandable bonus being paid.

VARIED PAYMENTS

The result of this policy, it was stated, is that a variety of bonus payments are in effect, and in some cases workers are not receiving any bonus payment.

It was contended in the brief that there was no necessity to clutter up the bonus policy and its payment with so many orders-in-council and also orders in the process of administration, and it was pointed out that these orders have been responsible for much of the unrest and disaffection of workers in Canada.

The following figures give the variety of bonus payments paid in Edmonton, federal government employees, $18.42 monthly; brewery workers, $3.81 weekly; soft drink workers, $3.17 weekly; school board employees, caretakers and maintenance workers with dependents, $100 annually; single, $30 anfually; civic employees, married, $2 weekly, single, $1 weekly; printers, 60 cents weekly; carpenters, 3.28, and bricklayers, no bonus.

It is pointed out that many of the workers within the same wage brackets receive vastly different bonus payments, and it is contended that such conditions are not conducive to satisfactory labor conditions.

PROTEST DELAYS

The brief also contained protests against delays that occur in the making of decisions and awards by both the National and the Regional War Labor Boards. It was said that evidence is not lacking that there is much unnecessary delay in many cases."

The outcome of this delay is that workers feel very resentful and become restless, when, in spite of everything they do to bring about amicable adjustments these boards would appear to be inclined to a wait-and-see procedure and lack of decision. Labor should not be blamed for consequences resulting from this condition, it was contended in the brief.

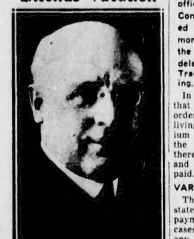

Submission will be made also in the brief seeking the lifting of the ban on the employment of Canadians by American contractors on war projects in northern Alberta and the North West Territories.

RESTRICTIONS UNFAIR

It is contended in the brief that it is unfair, and positively wrong in principle, that restriction should be applied to workers here that would prohibit them from accepting employment with United States firms engaged on vital construction projects.

The Trades Council will seek also a modification of the labor freezing order in respect to civic workers who volunteered to enter district coal mines, and who are now frozen in this industry. These men are key men in construction and maintenance work and are now needed for city work, but are unable to return to their jobs.

Extends Vacation

Premier William Aberhart, who on the advice of physicians, will extend his rest period at Vancouver. He went to the coast for a vacation at Easter.

Getting Around

with Jack DeLong

How did Gen. Jimmy Doolittle get out of China when his plane crashed after the spectacular raid on Tokyo more than a year ago?

According to Pan American Airways the "escape" of Jimmy Doolittle from China, before a swift-advancing Japanese invasion force, was almost as thrilling as the Tokyo raid itself.

Pan American Airways has for years been operating what is known as the "Middle kingdom space machine family" in partnership with the China National Government. The line is unique as the only air line in the world that flies only at night and in bad weather. The line has been at war with the Japs for six years.

China's leaders have called the air line China's lease-lend life line.

Capt. Moon Chin, one of Pan America's veteran pilots, had not heard of the Doolittle raid on Tokyo and was not aware of the identity of a short, squat man with a dirty face and stubble of beard. The man wore a battered U.S. officer's cap and Moon just made out the name Major James Doolittle on his leather jacket.

Maj. G. H. Scott To Speak Twice

Maj. H. G. Scott, national defence headquarters, Ottawa, arrived in Edmonton Tuesday morning to address meetings of the Canadian and Women's Canadian Clubs here. He is a guest at the Macdonald Hotel.

A former magistrate of the City of Calgary Major Scott spent last summer and autumn in Britain and will speak on the United Nation's war effort with particular emphasis on the occupied countries of Europe.

The Canadian Club luncheon meeting was held at 12:30 p.m., and the Women's Canadian Club meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m.

As Minister of Trade and Commerce Spoke at Joint Luncheon

At the joint luncheon meeting under the auspices of the Alberta Branch, Canadian Manufacturers' Association with the Kiwanis Club and the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce, held in the Macdonald hotel, on Monday. The guest speaker shown above, centre, was Hon. James A. MacKinnon, minister of trade and commerce, who spoke on "Trade Matters". To the right of H. Stutchbury, chairman, Alberta Branch, C.M.A., who acted as joint chairman of the meeting with G. Gottfred, president of the Edmonton Kiwanis Club, is Hon. J. C. Bowen, lieutenant-governor of Alberta. In addition to the above, seated, from left to right are shown: J. A. Christiansen, chairman, Edmonton Branch, C.M.A.; F. D. Sutcliffe, chairman, legislation committee, Alberta branch, C.M.A.; G. P. Morison, Ottawa, general Canadian priorities officer; G. E. Carpenter, Ottawa, secretary prairie division, C.M.A.; George B. Baillie, general superintendent, C.P.R. for Alberta; Hon. E. C. Manning, provincial secretary and minister of trade and industry; G. Gottfred, president, Kiwanis Club, to the right of Mr. MacKinnon; S. V. T. Jeffrey, general manager North West Purchasing Limited; R. H. Settle, president, Edmonton Chamber of Commerce; John Burns, president, Burns and Co., Limited, Calgary; H. W. E. Riley, representative, United States war production board; T. Ashenhurst, secretary, Alberta Branch, C.M.A.; and R. L. Cushing, Calgary, chairman-elect, Alberta Branch, C.M.A.

Army Engineers' Head is Visitor

Brig. R. Lambert, Ottawa, director of engineer services for the Canadian Active Army, visited Edmonton Monday, inspecting the C.W.A.C. quarters at the Prince of Wales Armory.

Brig. Lambert was accompanied by Lt.-Col. P. V. Harcourt, D.C.M., district engineer officer for M.D. 13.

The officers conferred with Lt.-Col. E. Brent, M.M., E.D., area commandanta nd left later in the day for Wainwright where a new army centre is under construction. They are expected to return here Tuesday and later leave for the Pacific coast.

Hog Production Outlook Bright

Hog production in Alberta during 1943 will at least equal that of last year when a record pork crop was harvested, in the opinion of John Burns, Calgary, president of Burns and Co. Ltd., who is in Edmonton on business.

He said that hog marketings during the winter were disappointing, but bad roads and the severe winter were factors contributing to the smallness of the marketings.

Commenting on meat rationing to start in mid-May, Mr. Burns said that the meat packing industry welcomed and had advocated rationing. It is the only fair method of distribution of commodities in which there is a tendency to shortages.

Mr. Burns said that hog marketings during the spring and summer months would be exceptionally heavy as farmers turned from harvesting and seeding operations to the finishing of hogs and cattle.

He said that marketing of cattle in recent months had been heavy, and was of the opinion that with the introduction of rationing there would be ample supplies for Canadian consumption, and some surplus for American requirements.

The Inquiring Reporter

THE QUESTION

Do you think there should be a greater penalty for infractions of the motor vehicle act?

THE ANSWERS

DAVE KEDDIE, farmer: Fining doesn't help any. Impounding the car might make law-breakers respect this law and prevent a recurrence of the infraction.

MRS. A. F. CURRIE, housewife: I think the law is strict enough in 75 per cent of the cases, and I don't think the penalty should be any greater than it is at present. I am in favor, however, of stricter measures where warranted.

MRS. C. DOBELL, housewife: I say, take 20 units off the gas ration for every offence. That would make the careless drivers take some notice of the law.

Last fall he celebrated his one-thousandth flight between the two coast cities, and has since made about 200 more. Capt. Ballentine has been transferred to main line duties, and is a pilot on the Fort St. John-Vancouver run.

An unusual stunt was the major attraction at Edmonton Cine Club meeting held last night in the Masonic Temple. It was called a "Screen Test." All the members were called up by name to face the camera at a time, and were called on to express various emotions under the floodlights. The whole proceedings were photographed. The members are waiting with mixed feelings the showing of the films at a future meeting. After this, two short films were shown on the same subject; they were the films made of a similar stunt at a club meetings several years ago. The meeting came to an close with the showing of two films made in 1936 by F. H. McDougall.

Officials at the provincial department of agriculture estimate that about 60 per cent of the standing grain has been threshed, and this week should see it finished. The worst situation is in the Vermilion-Vegreville and Holden-Ryley districts. There is still some to be done in the Brooks and Hanna districts but most of the grain in the south has been threshed.

"More Bacon for Britain" is the slogan of Edmonton district Indians. During the last few years the Indians have responded splendidly to the effort to raise more hogs and there are now 360 hogs on the Wintering and Michel reservations and other herds at Wabamun, Riviere Que Barre and Villeneuve. About 200 hogs are kept on the Indian residential school near Edmonton.

Entries are still coming in for the Edmonton and district festival. Herbert G. Turner stated Tuesday that local entries are definitely up this year and indications are that there will be a record number of entries for the entire festival. Investigation into a call received at city police headquarters Monday evening, in which two little girls with doll carriages reportedly had been running between vehicular traffic across Jasper avenue, failed to bring results at first. Not until later did a constable spot the tots, pushing their carriages down the middle of the street between 101 and 101A avenue. They were taken to the police station, the parents notified, and warnings given to everyone concerned.

More than 400 applications have now been received by the city commissioners for the 250 homes to be built here by Wartime Housing Ltd. Mayor John W. Fry stated Tuesday that he had not received any intimation from the Treasury Board concerning the final acceptance of the proposal to build these houses. He said that he would consult Hon. James A. MacKinnon, minister of trade and commerce, on the matter before the minister left for Ottawa.

A splendid opportunity for men between 18 and 45 years old, of low medical categories, to serve in the R.C.A.F. was opened here with the announcement Tuesday by Flt.-Lt. W. C. M. Bain, acting commanding officer at No. 3 recruiting depot, that 50 standard guards are to be enlisted at once. Applicants need have medical category high enough for home service only, although their general enlist for service anywhere in the world. They must also be willing to perform any type of service. It is pointed out that this is a rare opportunity for men who have previously been rejected to go on duty with the air force.

Meatless Day Sees Ham, Eggs Popular

Everybody asked for ham and eggs as usual in Edmonton cafes Tuesday morning and promptly received the eggs without the ham.

It was Edmonton's first meatless day in all history.

Restaurant workers said that nearly every customer forgot about the first meatless day and ordered ham or bacon as usual.

"But no one was peeved when we told them the ham and bacon was out for today," a waitress said.

Poached eggs on toast was a favorite alternative and is likely to prove extremely popular on Tuesday mornings after this, it was predicted.

For noon-time meals salads are likely to be popular, and also for evening dinner.

Edmonton's first meatless day was away to a good start.

Minute Make-Ups

Put the accent on your best feature, play it up! Play down the least attractive features. If you have a pretty mouth, use luscious reds for your lipstick. Learn to apply your lipstick in a perfect outline. If your mouth isn't your best feature and your eyes are, then use less dramatic lipstick shades and makeup your eyes. If your throat is lovely and your contour is not, then wear pearls and lovely soft necklines. Everyone will see your best feature when you accent it cleverly!

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Livability Is Vital For Success in Life

Valuable in Business, Indispensable in Marriage This Quality Offsets Many Faults; Likeable Folks Always Have Helpful Friends

Are you liveable? It is a queer thing that we never ask ourselves that question, for upon the answer to it largely depends our success, or failure, in life. No youth or maiden in picking out a wife or husband takes it into consideration, yet it is the one thing that makes, or mars, a marriage.

Livability is a quality in a class all by itself. It has only a remote kinship to the standardized virtues. Some of the noblest people in the world are the hardest to live with, while many a sinner is a companion who is dearer to us than a brother. Theoretically we admire the austere characters who never swerve a hair's breadth from the line of conduct they have laid down for themselves, no matter how much they trample upon the feelings of others, but, in reality, we prefer the softer, more flexible people who keep off of our toes and sidestep our peculiarities and prejudices.

UNSUCCESSFUL PEOPLE

The disregard of the amenities goes a long ways towards explaining many of the mysteries of life. As why, for instance, so many people of talent, intelligence, energy, and ambition fail, while others with far less ability succeed. If you will dig deep enough, you will nearly always find that the unsuccessful are those who cannot get along with other people. They are the unlivable.

They cannot adapt themselves gracefully to a situation. Everyone must kowtow to them. They can't take criticism or suggestion. They are faultfinding. Everything must be done their way. All their idiosyncrasies must be catered to. And in a busy and hurried world nobody has the time or inclination to bother with people who have to be handled with gloves, and be eternally appeased.

We all know brilliant doctors who have no patients because they lack a bedside manner. Lawyers without clients because they make enemies who pull them down instead of friends who would boost them up. Men of talent and trained ability who can never hold a job because they cannot get along with their fellow employees. Genius smotherered out in a thousand ways just by the lack of livability.

READY TO HELP

And we know plenty of men and women of ordinary intelligence and skill who have climbed to the top of the ladder just by reason of their likability. They got along smoothly with their bosses. They were popular with their fellow workers. They made friends with those with whom they came in contact and everybody gave them a handup.

If being livable is valuable in business, it is the one thing that is absolutely indispensable in making a marriage a success. It is even more important than love for love does not last unless its object continues to be lovable. Practically every young couple who get married are deeply enamored at the time they take each other for better or worse, but whether they stay that way depends altogether on whether they make marriage pleasant for each other.

Strangely enough, millions of husbands and wives ignore this simple fact. The husband seems to think that if he pays his wife's bills and is faithful to her, she will go on loving him and being glad she married him, no matter how grumpy and stingy and tyrannical he is. The wife considers that as long as she is virtuous and a reasonably good cook, she will still be her husband's dream girl, even if she nags him out of his life and is such a virago that he trembles when she speaks to him.

WRECKS HOMES

And when these marriages in which neither the husband nor wife make any effort to be agreeable, or to make their home a place of rest and peace and comfort, go on the rocks, they can't understand how it happened. The husband can't see why his wife lost her taste for him when he provided her with a good house and food to eat, even if he did raise ructions over the bills. The wife can't understand why he forsook her for the Other Woman when she always kept his socks darned, even if she did feel it her duty to be forever correcting his faults.

And the general public wonders why two such fine people are getting a divorce, and they say: "Isn't it queer that they couldn't get along together, when there is Jones who is just crazy about his wife who runs him in debt with her extravagance and is a sloppy housekeeper, and spends her time gadding around? And there is Mrs. Smith who sticks to that drunken, loafing, good-for-nothing husband of hers whom she has to support."

And nobody stops to think that the one redeeming quality in husbands and wives that offsets all other faults and blemishes is just for them to be pleasant to live with.

War Kitchen

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Today indulge in the Canadian favorite—pork chops. Trim off a little fat, fry it out, then saute the chops. Brown delicately on both sides, then cover the pan and simmer over over very low heat for about 30 or 40 minutes. Remove chops to hot platter, add 1 tablespoon flour and ¼ teaspoon dry mustard to drippings in pan. Stir well and cook two minutes. Slowly add 1 cup evaporated milk diluted with water. Stir until gravy is smooth. Season. Add more liquid if needed. Pour over chops. Serve very hot.

RIPE STRAWBERRY JAM
(10 6-ounce glasses)

Four cups prepared fruit, 7 cups sugar, ½ bottle fruit pectin.

Grind about two quarts fully ripe strawberries, or crush completely one layer at a time so that each berry is reduced to a pulp. Measure prepared fruit and sugar into large kettle, and mix well. Bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard exactly three minutes. Remove from fire and stir in bottled fruit pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just five minutes to cool slightly and to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once.

RIPE SWEET CHERRY JAM
(7 6-ounce glasses)

Three and one-half cups prepared cherries, 4 cups sugar, 1 box powdered fruit pectin.

Pit about 2½ lbs. fully ripe cherries; crush thoroughly or grind. (For a stronger flavor, add a few crushed cherry-pit meats to fruit while cooking.) Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure prepared cherry pulp into a 5-6-quart kettle, filling up, last cup or fraction of cup with water if necessary. Place over hottest fire. Add powdered fruit pectin, mix well, and continue stirring until mixture comes to hard boil. At once, pour in sugar, stirring constantly (o reduce foaming, butter may be added.) Continue stirring, bring to a full rolling boil, boil hard for one minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly and seal.

Tomorrow's Menu

(Eat the basic 7 every day)

BREAKFAST: Tomato and lemon juice, oatmeal, enriched white bread toast, strawberry jam, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Lamb and barley broth (from yesterday's lamb stew base), wholewheat toast, celery, cup custard, tea, milk.

DINNER: Shoulder pork chops with cream gravy, baked sweet potatoes, buttered spinach, enriched bread, butter or margarine, apple brown Betty, top milk, tea, milk.

Keep your sewing box handy these days. Get after small tears, rips in seams and hems, loose or missing buttons and snaps. Darn thin spots before they become gaping holes, and keep loose trimmings retacked. Repairing small damage before it becomes serious is important to your "make 'em last" campaign.

What To Do

Most people say grace before meals a different way, and we would like to know what way is correct.

Answer—Your question is difficult to answer because custom varies in different parts of the country, and with different religions.

In some homes when a meal is served, each person at the table bows his head and silently says his own thanksgiving. In other homes, and I belive particularly where there are young children, one of the children or the father, says his thanksgiving aloud.

Either way is correct, and any form of grace you use is correct. The words don't matter, and the idea is to thank God for the meal you are about to eat. Prayers that come from the heart are just as effective as those learned from a book.

Your Baby And Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

The glaring and tragic success of the Germans in their education for hatred of all but the "master race," ought to apprise all of us how easy it is to teach either hatred or love, either prejudice or appreciation.

The mind of a child is a sponge to soak up attitudes. Long before there is any capacity to think things out for himself the child may have become the repository of all the accumulation of prejudices and hatreds which the parents have been collecting. These attitudes and oponions may remain active long after the child has reached the age of reason or has had information and knowledge which should dispel them. It is hard to shake off feelings one has acquired about anything and everything.

This is one reason why prejudices against people, against races, religions, skin color, hair types, shapes of noses, etc., remain almost constant from generation to generation.

It is easily conceivable that the caricatures of the teeth of Japs would make "buck teeth" disliked for generations. These are emotions which might remain long after the source of them had been forgotten.

Mrs. A. M. Wonders if a mother could instill hatred in the mind of a 4½-year-old child. "This is my godchield and I loved him very much and he loved me. This last summer his mother and I had words and since then none of the children has looked at me. The little one pouts and makes faces when he sees me. My neighbor says she doesn't think a child of this age could hold a grudge and that what was said to the child would go in one ear and out the other. What do you think?"

The probability is that the child neither loves you nor hates you now, but is merely acting according to the dictates of a very silly, petty mother. If you would get to see the child again under amiable circumstances, his feelings would probably be the same toward you. But a continuous education of dislikes for you would be effective eventually.

Mrs. E. M. K. makes a comment in a nice letter which fits well into this discussion. "Any person who thinks, knows that hate is bred in the cradle. What a tragic pity that much suffering could not be spared by having a true Christian feeling of good will toward all men. I want to say bravo for your own fine, open-minded attitude toward prejudice, Mrs. Eldred, as evidenced in some of your past articles."

Our leaflet on "Early Discipline" may be had by parents wondering how to discipline the small child. It may be had by sending a four-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of htis newspaper.

Many fishermen believe erroneously that if they go fishing in the dark of the moon they will have better luck. This idea is mostly superstition, and certainly not good science. The notion is based on the belief that during the dark of the moon the fish cannot see to feed as well at night and are therefore more hungry in the daytime. The trouble with that idea is that it hasn't been proved that fish do most of their feeding at night, neither that lack of moonlight would effect it if they did.

World's first steel dam was the Ash Fork Dam, built in Johnson County, Ariz., in 1898.

My Day

BY ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

SAN FRANCISCO—Here we are on our way home, and we have had two lucky breaks. I've had a chance to see our son, Johnny, and our daughter-in-law, Anne, and their children again, and to take a young soldier who will soon be overseas to dine at a restaurant.

When I opened one of my newspapers yesterday morning in Los Angeles I gasped with dismay. I was confronted with a statement that I had seen every patient in the two naval hospitals which I had visited on Monday and I had not only taken their names, but the names of their families and home addresses, and had rashly promised that my husband would write to every one. Of course, I didn't make such a promise and I know the men themselves will appreciate the fact that I couldn't ask the president to write some eleven hundred extra letters.

For a moment I couldn't think how such a story could have begun. Then the germ of truth which so often starts these rumors came to me. In the Corona hospital one of the men was a patient from the Houston who took several cruises with my husband. He told me he took the President fishing sometimes, so I did ask for his name and I know that my husband will be interested in hearing about him and will want to drop him a line.

We were taught in our childhood that great oaks from little acorns grow, and readers would do well to remember it, for there is usually some foundation for everything that is written, but it may be embroidered in the telling, or it may grow like the oak tree, or it may be misinterpreted. Worse yet, sometimes in the things which we write ourselves, we take for granted that other people will understand how we think and feel, forgetting that nothing should ever be taken for granted and that when you want to convey something, you should say it clearly and in unmistakable terms. In any case, this will clear up, I hope, the disillusionment which some people might have felt had they waited for a letter from the President because a relative or a friend happened to be in the hospital at Long Beach or Corona.

I finished two books on this trip, "The Robe" and "The Human Comedy". Very different, and yet both of them teach very much the same lesson.

"The Robe," as you may remember, is the story of the crucifixion, but the fight which all men of good-will carry on in the world, begin then, and "The Human Comedy" by Saroyan, points out that each individual stands to be counted in that fight, day by day, wherever he is.

McKenney On Bridge

By WILLIAM E. McKENNEY
America's Card Authority

Freak distribution sometimes results in peculiar bidding, as it did in today's hand, which I played with Waldemar von Zedwitz. My original bid of one diamond was natural, but I don't know why West elected to pass his eight-card spade suit, unless he decided to wait and come into the bidding later. Von Zedtwitz, with his six-card diamond suit, decided to prepare the hand for no trump by bidding one spade. Two no trump with the South cards was a natural bid, and now West came in at three spades. Von Zedtwitz made a very fine three no trump bid in the North. I won the opening lead with the nine of spades, and when East showed out, I hoped to find him with the king of hearts and five flubs—in which case I knew I could make six. The next play was a small diamond to dummy's jack, then a small club. West winning my queen with his ace. Now West might have defeated the squeeze if he had returned a club, but he chose to return a heart. East played the ten-spot and I won with the ace. I now cashed the king of spades, came back to my hand with a diamond, went back to dummy and ran the diamonds.

When I led the last diamond, dummy was left with the queen of hearts and the seven of clubs. East could not let go the king of hearts, or dummy's queen would be good, so he had to bare down to the king of hearts and ten of clubs. When I led the small club from dummy, the queen dropped both the jack and ten, making the eight-spot good.

Mrs. A: "If I care for your Johnnie on Tuesdays and you care for my Sallie on Fridays, it will give us both a chance to help make surgical dressings."

Mother: "I wish I could work at the bomber plant but I can't find anyone to stay with the children. I feel I'm not doing much to help win the war."

Unless it is absolutely necessary, mothers of young children should not take full-time war jobs, but by co-operating with other mothers they can satisfy their desire to help by doing some volunteer work.

WEEKLY WARTIME NUTRITION HINTS

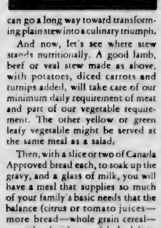

Martha Logan, Swift's famed home economist, whose weekly wartime cooking column is a regular feature of this page. Look for these valuable hints each Tuesday

by Martha Logan

Stew Can be Glorified

Delicious and nutritionally tops, stew is economical in its use of cheaper meat cuts

It's such a pity that some people still don't appreciate stew! And such a mistake! At its best, stew is a dish for a king, besides which it has an important niche in the patriotic housewife's wartime menu, both because it uses the thriftier cuts, (not to mention leftovers), and because it offers a good way of meeting her family meat and vegetable requirements in one succulent dish. So, here we give four basic rules which will help you turn your stews into the family's favourite dinner.

FIRST—Brown the meat. Cut it into serving portions or cubes and brown in hot lard or beef dripping.

SECOND—Keep the heat low. Always summer a stew. Never boil it.

THIRD—Don't overcook vegetables. Add the potatoes, the diced carrots and turnips, which are so good in stew, and the onions after the meat has simmered well. The vegetables will be nutritionally more valuable if the stew is served as soon as they are cooked. And don't hesitate to add celery, peas, string beans, mushrooms and other interesting vegetables that are on hand.

FOURTH—Experiment with flavourings. A bay leaf or a pinch of sage or thyme or a teaspoonful of Worcester sauce or ketchup . . . any of these can go a long way toward transforming plain stew into a culinary triumph.

And now, let's see where stew stands nutritionally. A good lamb, beef or veal stew made as above, with potatoes, diced carrots and turnips added, will take care of our minimum daily requirement of meat and part of our vegetable requirement. The other yellow or green leafy vegetable might be served at the same meal as a salad.

Then, with a slice or two of Canada Approved bread each, to soak up the gravy, and a glass of milk, you will have a meal that supplies so much of your family's basic needs that the balance (citrus or tomato juices—more bread—whole grain cereal—one other fruit) can safely be left to the other two meals.

Darwin Raiders Are Frustrated by Strong Defences

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA, May 4.—(AP)—The effectiveness of Allied ground defences was largely credited today with frustrating 21 Japanese bombers which sought to attack an airdrome near Darwin Sunday morning.

Dismayed and confused by the intense anti-aircraft barrage which greeted them, the high-flying raiders turned back before they had completed their bombing run. What bombs they managed to drop before the ground fire drove them away caused virtually no damage.

Miners in U.S. To Press For Original Terms

NEW YORK, May 4.—(AP)—John L. Lewis declared yesterday that the United Mine Workers' demands on the federal government in the miners' wage dispute will be the same as the original ones made upon the operators and added that he is "awaiting the initiative from Mr. Ickes."

The principal issues in both the bituminous and anthracite controversies, and which Lewis said still stand, are for a $2-a-day wage increases, underground travel pay and unionization of minor bosses.

REFUTES "PLEDGE"

At the same time he made his statement on the issues, Lewis broke his silence on President Roosevelt's speech of Sunday night and reiterated the stand of the miners that they "were no longer bound by the no-strike pledge."

"There were many surprising things about the President's speech," Lewis said. "I would not care to say or amplify in any way on the statement I have given you here."

Lewis charged the War Labor Board contravened the no-strike pledge given by labor in 1941.

Fuels Co-ordinator Ickes was directed by Roosevelt to run the coal mines for the government.

In reviewing labor's dealings with the War Labor Board, Lewis said:

UNDERSTANDING BREACH

"It is plainly evident that the adoption of the 'Little Steel formula' by the War Labor Board breached the understanding that labor had with representatives of the public, employers and the administration.

"The War Labor Board must accept the full responsibility for distress in the ranks of labor created by their contravention of the understanding and commitments arrived at in the December 1941 conference."

The U.M.W. chief said the policy committee had approved the acceptance by several district U.M.W. presidents in the soft coal area of positions as members of the regional advisory board set up by Ickes.

Eden Condemns Nazi Attempts To Split Allies

LONDON, May 4.—(CP)—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, in a statement to the house of commons on Polish-Russian relations, condemned today the "cynicism which permits the Nazi murders of hundreds of thousands of innocent Poles and Russians to make use of a story of mass murder to disturb the unity of the Allies."

The British government, Mr. Eden declared, used its influence from the outset in an effort to persuade the Poles and the Russians not to allow the German manoeuvres any success.

The government, he added, blamed no one "except the common enemy" for the dispute arising from a Polish demand for a Red Cross investigation of German charges that the Russians murdered 10,000 Polish officers near Smolensk prior to the Russian-German war.

SEEK SETTLEMENT

Mr. Eden said the British government's sole desire was to heal the breach between Moscow and the Polish government here "as swiftly as possible" and to restore Russian-Polish relations to the basis established by the collaboration agreement of 1941.

To that end Britain is working "in the closest consultation and collaboration with the United States," he added.

Expressing hope that the statesmanship which resulted in the previous Polish-Russian agreement would once more prevail, Mr. Eden declared:

"One thing at least is certain. The Germans need to indulge in no hope that their manoeuvres will weaken the combined offensive of the Allies or the growing resistance of the enslaved people of Europe."

Piping Contest Next Saturday

The annual piping and drumming competition of the Edmonton Boys' Pipe Band Association which is being held on Saturday in the I.O.O.F. hall, 103 street, is expected to result in keen competition among the boys for the various cups and medals. An added feature of this year's competition is the Stewart Campbell cup for the best style piper. This is expected to improve the already excellent appearance of the boys.

H. Lunan and R. McPherson are judges of piping, R. Gavin is judge of drumming, R. McKenzie will be steward assisted by Mr. Thompson.

An excellent program of dancing has been arranged following the competition.

Butter Stocks Now Plentiful Across Canada

OTTAWA, May 4.—(CP)—Canada now is a land laden with butter compared with the sparse supplies of only a few months ago.

A Dominion bureau of statistics report said at May 1, creamery butter stocks in Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Edmonton, Calgary and Vancouver totalled 5,591,193 pounds against 2,607,580 on the same date last year.

This statement on holdings compared with a report of 3,610,186 pounds in the same nine cities at April 1.

Six-Day Week For Coal Mines

WASHINGTON, May 4—(CP)—Harold Ickes, fuels administrator, today ordered a six-day week throughout the coal-mining industry of the United States as work was generally resumed after a week-end strike crisis.

The order was telegraphed to approximately 3,850 mine operators now running their properties as agents for the government.

Ickes said mines failing to operate six days weekly would suffer cancellation of the price ceiling increases granted them by the office of price administration to cover the added costs of overtime pay.

Wage Discussions Are Continuing

Wage negotiations are still continuing with Civic Union Local No. 30, according to the city commissioners. They stated that they had no official notification from union officials of any contemplated strike action.

Monday evening Malcolm Ainslie, business agent for the union, stated at a Trades and Labor Council meeting that union members were determined on strike action to achieve their demands for pay for statutory holidays and payment of the full cost of living bonus.

Commissioner R. J. Gibb stated that the city had made a counter proposal to the union officials which had neither been accepted nor rejected.

He said that the commissioners were conferring with Mr. Ainslie on wage and working conditions Tuesday afternoon, and that they were meeting the Federation of Civic Employees Unions on Wednesday afternoon to discuss the 1943 agreements.

Offers have been made to all civic unions, Mr. Gibb stated, and it is expected that these will be discussed at the Wednesday meeting.

Auto Licenses Reveal Increase

License plates for passenger cars and trucks and drivers' licenses, issued by the Edmonton branch of the Alberta Motor Association to date this year are considerably above the numbers issued for the corresponding period of last year.

License plates issued from Jan. 1 to April 30 in 1943, totalled 3,393, an increase of 366 over last year. Drivers' licenses issued to date this year total 5,232, or 878 more than was issued by the office for the same period last year.

Gas rationing books issued show a decrease, however, with only 3,306 books issued to date, against 5,150 last year.

Boy Suffers Burns

Arthur McDougal, four years old, of Evansburg, Alta., was brought to the city and admitted to the General hospital about 6:30 p.m. Monday, suffering from burns received while playing around burning shavings at a mill near his home, and into which he had fallen.

LIVESTOCK TRAFFIC

EDMONTON, May 4—Total receipts of cars trucked, driven and shipped by rail to local livestock agencies: Cattle 120, calves 3, hogs 223 and sheep nil.

Shipments on May 1st: One car cattle to country points, one car hogs to Eastern Canada.

Wheat Futures Down Fractions

WINNIPEG, May 4—(CP)—Wheat prices eased fractionally in quiet trading on Winnipeg Grain Exchange today, the May future closing ⅝ cent lower at $1 a bushel, the July ½ lower at $1.00⅝ and the October ⅝ lower at $1.01.

Shippers and exporters offered good support in the early stages of the session. American houses were on both sides of the market but most of the offerings came from a large local interest.

United Kingdom buyers took around 600,000 bushels of Canadian wheat, while 400,000 bushels sold for export to Eire.

Cash wheat trade was quiet with only selling to eastern feeding interests.

Light offerings in rye futures were insufficient to meet demand and only a small volume of this commodity changed hands.

Grain inspections at Winnipeg yesterday totalled 228 cars against 560 a year ago. Country marketings amounted to 482,000 bushels compared with 209,000 last year.

Fallow Visualizes Alaska As Bulwark of Democracy In Years Following War

When this war is over and won, which ever power holds Alaska holds the key to the world situation, Hon. W. A. Fallow, minister of public works, declared at a meeting of the Edmonton Social Credit Group, in the Social Credit Hall Monday night.

"Alaska after the war will become one of two things. It can become the bulwark of democracy, guaranteeing freedom and peace to the whole world—or it can become the slaughterhouse of generations yet unborn, whose blood will pour on this altar of sacrifice," the minister said. "It can only be one way or the other; there are no alternatives."

Which of these two paths the world will follow, depends on the pattern of the new order, it was stated.

SEES ENSLAVEMENT

"If either the Marsh or the Beveridge plan is to be the pattern for the post-war world, then God help us, because humanity will be enslaved," said Mr. Fallow.

Both of these plans emanate from the same source, in his opinion, and they are just exaggerations of the present system.

"Instead of trying to lift people from the bottom, these plans just drag some more down from the top, to the level of those lower."

The Loan Council, Rowell-Sirois report, the Mortgage Bank Act are but a few recent developments by the Dominion government which tended to take power from the hands of the province, and give it to international finance, so finance can dictate to the world when the time comes, Mr. Fallow told his audience.

Referring to early development of the Alaska Highway plan, he said both the province of British Columbia and the Dominion government had tried to locate the highway through British Columbia. "No one seemed to know there was such a place as Alberta."

"Then we (the Social Credit government) decided we should try and work on our own in connection with the route of the highway. We were quite sure that if it was to be built at all, it would be built by American money.

PUBLICIZE ADVANTAGES

"So we thought we should publicize through the United States information showing the comparative ease of construction of the route through Alberta, as against British Columbia.

"And we certainly did publicize it through the States," Mr. Fallow said.

"It isn't our fault if any one in the States hasn't heard of the Alberta route. We personally contacted every senator, every congressman, every governor, and many others in that country.

"The effect was electric. All Americans started to talk of the highway at once. Pressure was put on Washington. And in spite of the fact that not one of the engineering parties that had surveyed the road even mentioned Alberta in their reports, the Congress of the United States announced the highway would be built, and along the Alberta route."

Mr. Fallow stated that until recently, Alaska had been regarded as a frozen waste, an impenetrable barrier between the old and the new world. Now it is becoming recognized that the country is the most strategic part of the whole world, and that the Northwest passage across the top of the world is here to stay.

"We have regarded Alaska as away out of the world, but Kiska is half-way between the Pacific coast and Japan. The Bering Sea, between Alaska and Siberia, is only 25 miles wide at its narrowest part, and engineers before now have suggested tunnelling under this narrow reach of water."

The minister predicted Alberta would become the leading province of Canada, and all the more important because the route to Alaska lies through this province.

"To build up a machine that will do an efficient job in the north, you must have oil, minerals, and food, and we have them all.

"We know that there is enough oil in the North to last the world for 100 years, and that sinister forces are at work to prevent the development of these oil resources," asserted Mr. Fallow.

HARD FIGHT LIKELY

"There will probably be a fight, a hard fight, to get the development started. But those resources will be developed, and this government will see to it they are."

Politicians, the minister concluded, can hold up the industrial development of the province to some extent, but they can't hold the development up forever. "The time will come when Alberta will be industrialized, after her oil resources are developed," he predicted.

Mr. Fallow was introduced by Hon. E. C. Manning, minister of trade and industry. Mr. Manning paid high tribute to his fellow-minister's contribution to the development of the north country. "Mr. Fallow has made the greatest developments, in my mind, of any person in Canada," said Mr. Manning.

A film, "Wings Over the North," was shown at the meeting. John Gould, president of the Social Credit group, was in the chair, and Mrs. E. C. Manning played piano accompaniment for singing.

Douglas transport received orders to evacuate refugees from Michna airport, as the Japs were advancing down the Burma road and Lashipo was in flames.

Doolittle was in a hurry to get on to India with important reports on the Tokyo raid and informed Pilot Moon to this effect.

The officer also told the pilot the U.S. ambassador in China had informed him the Japs were certain to be in Michna by nightfall and it was dangerous to land.

Capt. Moon had his orders though and was not very greatly impressed by the shabby American officer. He reminded his passenger that "We have a war going on around here" and laid his course for Michna airfield.

When the plane landed the sound of heavy firing nearby could be heard. The Japs were just over the hill. Thousands of terror-stricken refugees crowded round the three transports on the field, hoping to be taken away.

Moon's plane seated 21. These seats were quickly filled. Then there were 30 in the cabin.

When the 50th passenger jammed into the cabin, Maj. Doolittle yelled to Pilot Moon:

"I hope to hell you know what you're doing."

Moon replied that every person aboard was a life saved from the fiendish Japs and crustily reminded the worried Doolittle that:

"There is a war going on over here. You do lots of things you wouldn't do at home—when you have to!"

When the 60th passenger was aboard, Moon asked the U.S. major if he'd be good enough to see that the cockpit door was kept closed. It might be a little tricky to handle the over-loaded plane, he explained.

* * *

Moon got the impression the major was trying to be funny for he remarked:

"I think I'd rather have gone back the way I came."

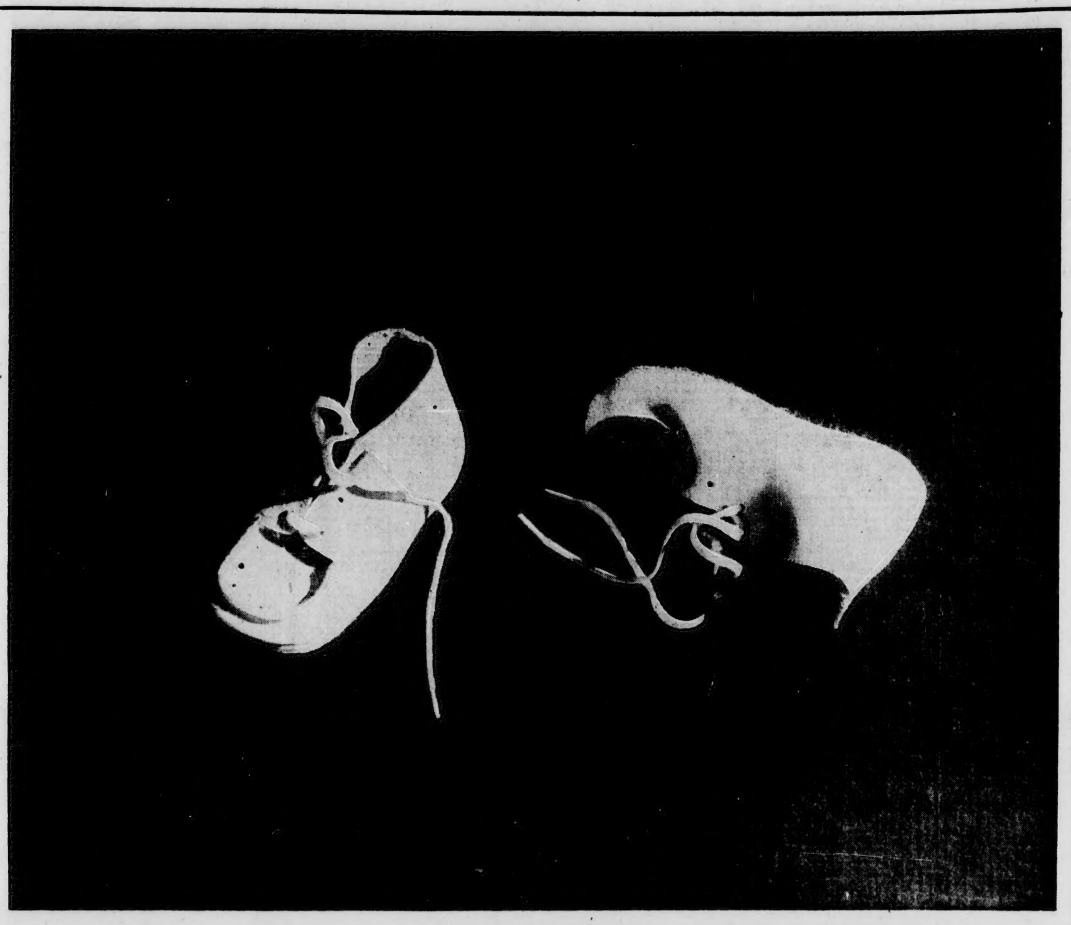

When the machine landed safely at Calcutta four hours and 12 minutes later, eight unlisted passengers tumbled out of the rear mail compartment. They had smuggled themselves aboard after the cabin door had been locked—to raise the total to 72 on that particular trip.

No wonder Jimmy Doolittle wished he could go back the way he came.

ASK GUIDANCE FOR AIRFIELDS

"Link" towns in Britain's peacetime airline network have asked the Air Minister for guidance on the post-war future of local airfields taken over by the ministry.

What Does The Future Offer?

The shape of things to come will be determined by what we do now.

We, of this generation are engaged in a struggle of barbaric cruelty. We are fighting that our way of life may survive—that the coming generation may enjoy freedom of speech—freedom to worship God as they will—freedom to determine their own destiny.

There must be no compromise—no appeasement—nothing less than unconditional surrender is our goal if the succeeding generation is to be spared the horrors of war. All post-war plans for a better world are but visionary dreams unless we smash through to Victory.

For over three years our men in the armed forces have trained faithfully for the day of attack. Now our leaders tell us the time for attack is at hand. We dare not deny our fighting men one single cartridge that may be needed to do the job.

It's our job—yours and mine—to supply the millions of tons of war materials that are essential to Victory. Let's buy Victory Bonds to the utmost of our ability—two ways—put our savings into Victory Bonds and buy all we can on the 6-month installment plan out of income.

DARK JUNGLES

JEALOUSY

CHAPTER XVIII

THE acrid odor of wood smoke filled Barry's nostrils as he came down the steps of the estancia and stepped out into the early morning sunshine. Renaldo, his shirt sleeves rolled high on his muscular arms, his shirt open at the neck, was shouting orders and moving quickly among the numerous copper kettles that boiled over banked charcoal fires.

"Looks like a busy place around here," Barry called when he was only a few paces away.

"From now on it will be," Renaldo said good-naturedly. "We've got to get our shipment packed and sent out by mule train to Puerto Barrios for the steamer leaving there next week.

Barry stooped by a boiling kettle and watched the Indian pour a large bagful of the milky latex into the hot mass.

"What happens after you boil this stuff?" he asked Renaldo.

"We boil it till it's very thick," Renaldo stopped to explain rapidly, "and then pour it into molds where it hardens like bricks. We put our plantations trade mark on it, and the chiclero's number and then it is checked and packed into waterproof canvas bags for shipment." He held a match against the side of the hot kettle until it flared then touched it to his pipe.

"Good morning."

They turned at Allison's gay call, and watched her crossing the clearing from the Indian huts. She was in white jodhpurs and a lemon yellow skirt. She was strutting like a happy boy, and whistling blithely. "Don't you love all this excitement!" she cried to Barry. "What are you two pow-wowing about?"

"He was telling me how chewing gum is made," Barry grinned his greeting.

Renaldo went on with deep satisfaction. "It will be our biggest shipment to date. We have orders for all the chicle we can produce. It seems that armies in the field like their chewing gum."

Allison grimaced at Barry. "There," she cried, "I told you I was coming down here to do my bit for the soldiers and you laughed at me."

"No great benefactor is appreciated at first," Barry winked at Renaldo.

Renaldo turned to test a kettle of the boiling latex. "Nevertheless," he said as he worked, "chewing gum is recognized now even by the war department."

"Morale builder, eh?" Barry said. Renaldo nodded. The latex had not boiled long enough. He gave the stirring paddle back to the attending Indian.

Barry's smile was fading into a brooding look of concern. "I must get back to my own job pretty quick."

Allison smiled. "You're just bound to get those quicksilver mines to help the allies to shorten the war to cut down our chicle business, aren't you?"

"That's it," Barry told her with a terse grin.

She turned to Renaldo, abruptly serious. "How soon can you go with him?"

"I must finish this batch of chicle and get it packed on the mules," Renaldo told her. "Then I must make a quick trip to the new grove to get the chicleros started there. But in a week—"

"A week is too long," Barry's impatience burned through his voice. "I'm going alone."

Renaldo's sharp dark eyes rested thoughtfully on Barry. "I know what you are enduring," he said gravely. "I am not a patient man myself when my work is not going forward. But believe me, it would be fool's haste for you to go now. In the first place, this fever of yours is treacherous. It would strike you down, addle your thoughts when you wish to be most lucid."

"He's right," Allison cried to Barry.

"Then," Renaldo went on, "I doubt you would reach Moncha Suma alive. The Indian girl died, you know. The tribe is up in arms. And your word will not be proof of your innocence."

"It's got to be!" Barry cried irritably. "What other proof can I get?"

"My friendship," said Renaldo quietly. "When I go with you, they will not harm you. And when I tell Moncha Suma that I, his friend, vouch for you, then he may absolve you from blame. That is the only way I know you may be able to accomplish your mission."

Barry drew a deep breath. "I suppose you're right."

"And you will put in a word with the chief about his quicksilver mines?" Allison demanded of Renaldo.

Renaldo nodded. "Yes, I will be glad to do that," he said.

"Thank you, Renaldo."

The Spaniard's eyes glowed as they met Allison's. Barry felt a new twinge of irritation. He deliberately broke up the glance.

"I'm the one to thank you," he said hastily. "I appreciate your doing this even if I do sound grouchy."

Renaldo's hand dropped onto Barry's shoulder. "It's a great pleasure to do it for you—and Miss Topping," he said. He turned to an Indian waiting with his testing ladle.

Barry and Allison strolled across the clearing toward the estancia. Allison was frowning.

"There must be some way we can cut down that week," she murmured. "But I know Renaldo has to go to the new grove. He told me last night what a find it is. The montadores reported it to be richer than the main one just north of the estancia. And he has to be there to hire a new crew of chicleros from the Indians coming over from Ledia."

"You sound just like a career woman," Barry teased.

"What's wrong with that?" Allison's violet eyes turned up toward him gleaming with the light of battle.

"Nothing, nothing!" Barry retreated hastily. "I guess it's your own business."

"I've been under that impression for a long time," she said gaily, "but you're slow about getting it into your head. Now Renaldo is a very smart man. He knows enough not to argue when a woman makes up her mind."

"If it's about your going back to New York," Barry said, "I don't think he wants to argue any more."

She gave him a mischievous, secretive smile. "Renaldo is a prince," she said, "and he worked up from a pauper. He told me how fiendishly poor he was as a kid, and how ambitious. When he was a little urchin in Rio he did odd jobs, sold papers, ran errands, cut hedges. Finally he worked his way through law school at the university there. Father met him at Puerto Barrios and hired him on a percentage basis shortly before he died. He says it's the first chance he's had to get the profits from his own ingenuity."

"Is he going to make his charm pay too?" Barry demanded as he opened the door for her.

She sent him a wide-eyed stare of innocence. "I don't know what you mean," she smiled demurely. "But he did say once that a fortune teller told him he would be rich and powerful and marry a beautiful blond."

McCoy Health Service

Not so long ago outstanding English surgeon made the statement that diet and drainage were the outstanding factors in relation to bodily health, and those readers who consider that anything relating to diet, harks of food fadism, or plain tommy-rot, must of necessity agree that unless the body is suitably drained it will soon become clogged with waste and impurities and sickness and death will ensue.

Those in rural communities know full well that a tract of land which is swampy and marshy and is not properly drained, will soon become a breeding ground for disease and pestilence, and with the breeding of flies, mosquitoes and other insects, a scourge of typhus fever or malaria or some other plague will manifest itself in the community.

Ferdinand DeLesseps failed in his attempt to build the Panama Canal because he did not drain the swamp land there. We are well aware in our cities that in order to maintain health in the community proper scientific drainage system must be installed and the waste matter scientifically disposed of.

One of the greatest problems in London after an air raid is when the sewer service is disrupted due to the bombing. The health of the community depends upon drainage and the health of that body of yours depends also upon the disposal of the waste matter before it accumulates and pollutes the system.

We are fearfully and wonderfully made and our body mechanism is so constructed as to retain that which is needed for health and nutrition and to discard the waste matter. The body contains within itself a refining system, filtering system, laboratories and highly specialized manufacturers and the kidneys are accessories to the main unit. The colon, or main sewer is used to carry off the bulky waste.

When this human sewage system is crowded beyond its capacity it "ills up and the circulation becomes sluggish and is finally stopped. The crying need of the unhealthy body is for drainage, not only from the large bowel, but from the lymphatic system, the veins and samll arteries which maintain the circulation.

All that I have to say regarding diet today, is that good body drainage is hampered by over-eating. Many of us are inclined to eat more than we actually need. A great newspaper editor once said: "I can say truly that half I eat keeps me alive and the other half keeps my doctor alive." So you see good health depends on what you eat and on the disposal of the waste matter. Incorrect eating, including overeating, and improper drainage, produces systematic poisoning.

All questions regarding health and diet will be answered. Large, stamped, self-addressed envelope must be enclosed. Write on one side of paper only. Letters must not exceed 150 words. Address McCoy Health Service, The McCoy Building, 1151 West 6th Street, Los Angeles, Calif.

Alberta Prepared to Share In Higher Grants for Aged Declares Hon. Solon E. Low

Alberta, anxious to lead the way to better conditions for old-age pensioners, did it alone—with one other province—but today, a year later, others are asking questions, said Hon. Solon E. Low, provincial treasurer, in an address to a large number of the Pensioners' Society, who gathered at the I.O.O.F. hall Monday evening.

The speaker told h:: listeners that it was almost two years since he had attended a meeting of the Pensioners' Society, and he chose to look back on that evening, he said, and then consider what had transpired since then, on things which had affected them, and what he thought might be the course of events in the near future.

He said there had been many signs of progress since 1940, concerning old-age pensioners in Canada, and particularly in Alberta. It is well, he observed, to aim higher than what we expect to hit. Now, said Mr Low, he was expecting to see something done.

REVIEWS PROGRESS

The speaker told how, in the fall of 1941, after discussions with members of the Pensioners' Society and the provincial executive, communications, seeking the joint co-operation in approaching the federal government with a view to having the old-age pension act amended and securing higher pensions, were sent to all provincial premiers. Only two provinces took the matter up—Alberta and British Columbia.

Out of the communication, however, continued Mr. Low, some good things have come. More are in the offing.

In 1942 the Act in the province of Alberta was changed, but previous to the amendment, by lopping here and scaling there, the possible supplementary allowance of $5 was made, cost of which was borne by the province. Pensioners in Alberta were enabled to meet the cost of increased living, and were now receiving $25 a month.

"And we are ready to bear our share, in the province of $30 a month," declared Mr. Low.

Careful examination of the Act revealed that reciprocal agreements with other provinces provided some difficulties, the speaker explained, pointing out that supplementary allowances cannot at present be paid to Manitoba and Saskatchewan residents of this province.

UNIFORM PROCEDURE

The only thing to do, he said, is to work with the other provinces and make uniform the procedures in respect to old-age pensions.

Only between the provinces of British Columbia and Alberta is there a direct agreement in which the two go hand in hand with better treatment of old-age pensioners, he said, adding that other provinces are now beginning to take notice of it, and asking about it. He specifically mentioned Manitoba, which province had twice enquired, and sought the support of this and the other provinces in sending a representation to the federal government, seeking to have introduced amendments to the old-age pension act.

People are thinking more about social security of their parents, declared Mr. Low, saying that the commandment, "Honor thy father and mother" is not shallow mockery. This land, choicest of all lands in the world, was given into the stewardship of these people, to be theirs as long as they care about it.

The speaker explained the effect of the new pension increase on the provincial budget, by saying the provincial expenditures in this respect had been practically doubled. To pay the increase during 1943, he said, it would cost the province about three-quarters of a million dollars. This was not something just for a year or two, but had become an annual fixed expense. It was fixed until the provinces demanded from the federal government that the old-age pension act be amended.

LIMIT OF ABILITY

Mr. Low believed the limit of ability so far as social services in this province were concerned, had been reached until there has been a change between federal and provincial governments in financial matters, or until there is a greater population or more wealth here.

People have started to think—think of changes for the better, continued the speaker, as he told of the study being made of the Marsh plan —likening it to a Beveridge plan made applicable to Canada. Something, he said, is stirring people to do better things. Improvement to ourselves brings improvement to the land we live in.

The speaker referred to the interest in a health service plan by British Columbia, wherein an attempt is being made to arrange for free medical and prescription services to old-age pensioners, and said he was keeping in touch with this program.

In due course, said Mr. Low, the Dominion government may call a meeting of all provinces to discuss with pension authorities the possibility of health services supplementary to age pensions. Some uniform scheme for the entire Dominion is necessary, he declared. It will be easier for everybody concerned.

OFFERS SUGGESTIONS

Showing that results are always obtained by getting together, Mr Low made a few suggestions to his listeners, the foremost of which was to consider the importance of winning the war. People must realize that there are things which we must go without, do without, things we must work for, if we are to be free. A clear view of things will help morale to rise, he declared.

He urged them to work together;

White Explains Meeting With City Chamber

Fred J. White, Winnipeg, regional superintendent, Unemployment Insurance Commission, told members of the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council Monday night that at a recent meeting with members of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce "he had been sent by his superior officer to investigate certain complaints received by the department."

He was being questioned concerning that meeting, and had been asked why he had not called in representatives of labor. One representative said that the Chamber of Commerce laid responsibility for the order banning the hiring of Canadians on war projects by American contractors at his doorstep."

CLARIFIES POSITION

He pointed out that the ban was not the result of his visit to Edmonton, and the conference with the Chamber of Commerce, and pointed to the fact that the ban had been put into effect, and had been modified to permit employment of Canadians a considerable time prior to that meeting.

Mr. White, who is a former M.L.A. for Calgary, and for years president of the Alberta Federation of Labor, said that he had consulted with labor officials during his visit here at that time, but his reference from the department, in his judgment, did not permit him to call in representatives of labor to the conference.

He answered several questions relative to the operation of the Unemployment Insurance Commission and selective service, and at the conclusion of the question period delegates expressed their appreciation with a standing vote of thanks.

Council of Nations Advocated in U.S.

CHICAGO, May 4.—(AP)—Formation of a "Council of Nations based on the United Nations" to maintain world order after the defeat of the Axis was advocated yesterday by the Republican Post-War Policy Association. The conference, attended by 70 delegates from 12 midwestern states, approved a resolution to that effect.

to do this, and called it "Democracy in Action." "You can show it to the world," he said. "Democracy can be put in action right here at home."

He suggested pensioners make some effort themselves to better, to re-word, or revamp, their regulations, bring them every possible help. They could help the government and themselves, which is true co-operation, he said.

Universal brotherhood can come only through honesty, charity, kindness and honest dealing, added the speaker, saying "No matter how enthusiastic we are for a cause, we shall not get very much out of those things until the hearts of men are changed.

There must be real culture of the heart; we must make for greater understanding . . . an ideal economic system where we can live in peace, to a good old age."

MUSICAL PROGRAM

Musical numbers by Miss Elizabeth Moore, violinist; Paul Suvan and Walter Sorenson, with their electric and singing guitars, and the latter in a piano solo; Mrs. S. Dunbar with the reading, "Women's Rights", were greatly enjoyed. Mrs. J. B. Robertson acted as accompanist. Edward C. Fisher was chairman.

Tribute to Walter Sorenson, blind musician and music teacher, was paid by Mr. Low in his opening remarks. "The greatest sermons are preached through men like Walter Sorenson," he said, adding, "and his musical soul." It was men like him, who, in improving themselves, made others happy.

Several Vehicles Are Now Recovered

An auto owned by R. Andrews, taken from his garage sometime between Saturday night and Sunday noon, has been recovered. So have a couple other vehicles. James Obee sheet metal worker, discovered the stolen auto in a slough near the 149 street, where it had apparently become mired.

The thieves, in an effort to move it, helped themselves to a truck. When that became stalled in the mud, they visited American quarters with the view to obtaining another car, to move the stalled vehicles. Instead, they took a third car. The three vehicles were recovered.

Victory Loan Meets Success In Rural Areas

Thirteen district divisions in northern Alberta have passed the halfway mark to their objectives in the Fourth Victory Loan; one division is over the top and is now 12.5 per cent. past the quota set for the territory; eight divisions have achieved more than 40 per cent., and 14 report sales in excess of 30 per cent. of quotas set, it was announced Tuesday by officials at loan headquarters here.

Honor of being the first rural district to reach its quota goes to the Waskatenau-Radway division. Sales on Monday brought this district to 112.5 per cent. of the quota of $40,000, the actual sales being $45,000.

It is interesting to note that in the Third Victory Loan only 11 sales had been made in this district during the first week.

In second place in the list is Hughenden with 70.1 of its quota achieved. The sales up to Monday night amounted to $23,150 of a $33,000 quota. Third place was filled by Innisfree with 67.1 per cent of the $32,000 quota reached. Sales in this district amount to $21,500.

FOURTH PLACE

The Chauvin-Edgerton division had climbed into fourth place with sales totalling $23,300 out of a $35,000 quota, for a percentage of 66.6. Lloydminster-Dewberry has also achieved 65.2 per cent of its quota with sales of $16,300 out of a quota of $25,000.

Before The MAGISTRATE

It was a great day for the workers of the country, with every available man needed in these times of labor shortages, according to the pleas put forth where celebrants had defence counsel. Magistrate A. I. Millar, K.C., thought it possible to get along without the services of some of these celebrants and imposed fines and costs or imprisonment, or just plain imprisonment.

George F. Richards pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication, but thought his services as a farmer entitled him to a light sentence. The magistrate informed the accused he was just beginning to lay over on him, and fined him $20 and costs or 30 days. Edward McCauley, with a lengthy record, charged with intoxication, was given up to three months with hard labor. Joseph Shearer was remanded to June 4 for sentence.

Alice Dahl's charge of uttering threats to Sarah bollys consumed a long time and two teachers were the complainant. The case was dismissed, with the magistrate's warning to the former to control her temper. The stories of complainant and her daughter were "exact reproductions" said the defence. The stories conflicted, and the case was "Case dismissed," said Mr. Millar, who said he found considerable dissatisfaction with both accused and defendant.

A registration certificate owned by one girl has been stamped by the liquor vendor. The owner, on the witness stand, stated she had not purchased any liquor. The certificate had been in the purse of Helen Harrison, charged with a breach of the national registration act, and for whom she works. The case was dismissed, the magistrate asking that the marking on the registration certificate be investigated.
